JURY GETS BECKER CASE

DR. ELIOT AT 78, IN HIS FIRST POLITICAL SPEECH

In the first political speech of his life, President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University, in his seventy-eighth year, today advocated the election of Woodrow Wilson for President before an enthusiastic gathering of 3,000 men and women in Tremont Temple.

It was a noon-day rally, held under the auspices of the Wilson League of College Clubs. In addition to Dr. Eliot, who was unstintingly cheered as he spoke, were other prominent speakers, including John Sharp Williams, United States Senator from Mississippi; General Charles W. Bartlett and John R. Murphy. Former Secretary of State Richard Olney presided.

Dr. Eliot made a stinging speech. He condemned the Republican party machine. He said in part:

When I was first asked to speak at a rally for Wilson by college men, I didn't believe in appealing to any class. College men are deeply and widely divided in this contest. Therefore there isn't much danger in speaking. The American colleges have always welcomed every class. The constitution of every American college has always been democratic.

I appeal for votes for Wilson to be given by the real representatives o. the entire community. When the government is ruled by a class it will be at an end. "Equal rights for all, special privilege for none." That's what I heard in my early days. That brings me to the prime issue in the campaign, the tariff—the high protective tariff.

Effects of High Tariff.

We have had some recent instances of the effect of a particular tariff here in Massachusetts. The concerns protected the highest paid the lowest wages.

The working people today are not adequately protected. The capitalists are the ones protected. I want equal rights for all and special privileges for none. The saying is that "a cheap coat makes a cheap man." Let's reverse that and have it that a dear coat makes a valuable man. So give the working man the wages to buy a dear coat. We are all consumers, rich and poor. We want to see the Democratic party take that view. Tariff is a very bad mode of collecting taxes. Put the Democratic party in power to start anew and abolish the tariff as it stands today. This is the most instructive campaign since the Civil War. What do the American people stand for? They stand for the security of life and property and liberty protected by law. The liberty by law is dearer to the hearts of the American people. There are rash proposals made to alter our judicial system. I appeal to the people as a whole, to put the Democratic party the one to deal with the changes!

People Should Take Reins.

The Republican party is contented with a policy of "standpattism." The party with the strongest leader is not the party to deal with constitutional and judicial changes. The American people had better put the Democratic party in charge of the government.

The Republican party has been in power almost since the Civil War. It is high time the American people looked sharply and assumed the reins of government, and put the Democratic party in power.

Whitfield Tuck of Winchester called for three cheers for the "Grand Old Man o Massachusetts." Great applause followed.

Put Paris Labels On Dresses Made in New York Shops

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—When is a Paquin gown not a Paquin? When it is labelled in New York instead of Paris.

One may buy any Paris label desired in a few minutes in this metropolitan city. So says Alexandre M. Green, a tailor and dressmaker, at No. 26 East Thirty-third street.

Mr. Green says that he is not "knocking" Paris or any other foreign fashion centre, but he wants those cities to retain their rights and New York stand on her own labels. Mr. Green has a large collection of labels which he bought in New York for curiosity's sake.

In the collection are labels purporting to be those of Paquin, Callot, Francis, Drecoll, Beer, Doucet, Raduits, Agnes, Worth, Templier, Rasoleau, Cheruit, Perdeoux, Doullet, Martial & Armand, Bernard, Jenny, Maurice, Georgette, Lewis, Reboux, Roger, Carlier, Meyer, Talbot, Virot, Blum, Alphonsine, Marie Louise, Louison, Heitz Boyer, Maria Guy, Lanvin, Julia Beaucourt, Royant, Mangin and others.

Second Crop of Raspberries for Arlington Table

The family of Frank A. Noyes, a grain dealer operating on the floor of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and residing at Arlington, had a unique experience for residents of these latitudes today, when they had for dessert a quart of second crop raspberries grown in their garden on Paul Revere road.

This attests for the lateness of the season better than anything else that has come to light. There have been many reports of second blooming of June roses and of apple trees bursting out in blossom, but this is liable to happen any time when the killing frosts hold off until mid-October, but for raspberries to ripen a second time is unheard of in these parts.

The Noyes' raspberry bushes are in a sheltered southerly exposure and the two or three frosts that have occurred this month have not affected them.

HEIR TO $125,000, HELD AS BURGLAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Heir to one-fourth of an estate valued at $500,000, a man who is said by the police to be William Arnold Victor Koch, was held a prisoner under bail in police court here, charged with attempted burglary, which, according to detectives who arrested him, was the result of their captive's mania for excitement. The police say he has twice served sentences in jail for housebreaking and burglary.

NEW LINE TO BOSTON ASSURED

That the Hamburg-American line will come to Boston was practically assured today when Mayor Fitzgerald received the following telegram from Herr Ballin, president of the steamship line, who is now in New York:

Please accept my thanks for your kind message. I shall come to Boston as soon as can possibly arrange it, and I trust I shall be able to give Boston an excellent service of passenger steamers to Hamburg, calling at Cherbourg for Paris and at Plymouth for London.

The telegram was handed to the Mayor just before he and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce started for New York to welcome Herr Ballin and the directors of the line and to assure them that Boston is enthusiastic over the coming of the great steamship line to Boston.

The Mayor's Telegram.

The Mayor sent this telegram to Herr Ballin today:

Boston extends to you and your associates of the Hamburg American line a cordial invitation to visit this city and inspect its dock system. All the people of the city are very anxious that the Hamburg American line should enter Boston, and we will do everything in our power to make it successful.

The party left Boston today on the 1 o'clock train and will arrive in New York at 6 P. M. It is headed by Mayor Fitzgerald, and includes members of the Board of Port Directors and the Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber is represented by William C. Brewer, chairman of the committee on maritime affairs, Elwyn G. Preston, chairman of the committee on foreign trade, and others.

Bancroft Goes from Holyoke.

Chairman of the Port Directors, Hugh Bancroft made an address at Holyoke at noon today, and took the 6 o'clock train for New York to join the Bostonians.

The journey of these representative Bostonians to meet the Hamburg officials in New York is the result of the suggestion of the Boston AMERICAN that these steps be taken.

The trip to New York was therefore planned in order to convince the German steamship men that Boston is in earnest and is willing to make every necessary concession to the great steamship company to be included in its service, which is more important than ever since the Panama Canal is so near completion.

Should be taken. The AMERICAN was informed by its representative in New York that Herr Ballin might not come to Boston, and that other more important interests than the establishment of a Boston passenger service might hold him in New York during the ten days that he will be in America.

HUNT AUTO GANG FOR POSTOFFICE BREAK IN READING

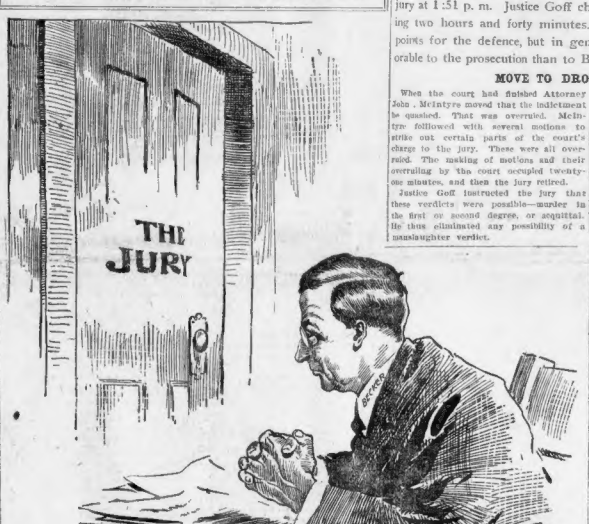
After trailing the yeggmen who blew open the safe at the North Reading postoffice early today, Chief of Police Croswell of Reading and Chief Upton of the fire department declared this afternoon that the break had been made by a gang of "auto robbers." An auto which stopped on the Peabody road near the postoffice was traced as far as West Peabody by the peculiar "tread" of its tires. The police also believed the work was probably done by the organized gang of postoffice thieves who have been operating in New England for the past month.

The force of the explosion in the postoffice tore off the front of the safe door and partially demolished the desk of A. E. Carpenter, where the postoffice is located.

The noise awoke residents within half a mile of the postoffice. Miss Eleanor E. Campbell, nineteen, and the youngest postmistress in the state, was notified. She reported that nothing had been stolen.

JUDGE GOFF RULES ACCUSED'S LIFE HANGS ON ROSE'S STORY

AWAITING THE VERDICT



NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The fate of Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, accused of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, went to the jury at 1:51 p. m. Justice Goff charged the jury in an address lasting two hours and forty minutes. In it he brought out important points for the defence, but in general it was regarded as more favorable to the prosecution than to Becker.

MOVE TO DROP CASE FAILS.

When the court had finished Attorney John . McIntyre moved that the indictment be quashed. That was overruled. McIntyre followed with several motions to strike out certain parts of the court's charge to the jury. These were all overruled. The making of motions and their overruling by the court occupied twenty-one minutes, and then the jury retired.

Justice Goff instructed the jury that these verdicts were possible—murder in the first or second degree, or acquittal. He thus eliminated any possibility of a manslaughter verdict.

He told the jury that the story of Jack Rose must be the basis of their deliberations; that if they accepted his story they would convict Becker, and if they rejected it they would acquit him.

This ruling was regarded as favorable to their cause by the attorneys for the defence.

Becker Predicts His Acquittal.

Lieutenant Becker predicted his acquittal. He said:

"I do not believe there is a possibility of being convicted. If I am there is no such thing as justice."

The defendant was awake early in the Tombs and before Justice Goff convened court to charge the jury, Becker was visited by Attorneys McIntyre and Hart, who have been conducting his case.

He told the lawyers he had no worry for himself but he feared the effect of the trial on his wife.

Becker's lawyers announced in advance of the appearance of Justice Goff that they had demanded instructions calling for a verdict for murder in the first degree or acquittal. The opinion was expressed by well informed lawyers, however, that Justice Goff was not likely to grant the demand.

Justice Goff during the night went over 147 requests presented by the defence. He got little sleep, but looked fresh when he reached the criminal courts building.

Justice Goff's Charge.

Justice Goff spoke in a low, gentle voice which was in contrast to the biting tones the lawyer had used in summing up.

JUDGE TELLS JURY BECKER'S FATE HANGS ON JACK ROSE'S STORY

LIEUTENANT AND WIFE LISTEN CALMLY TO THE WORDS OF THE COURT.

Only a few of the judge's words reached the ears of the audience.

The court began by declaring the case had reached its climax, where plain words were necessary because it was going to be left to twelve individual consciences for determination.

Great Crowd on Hand.

This trial has been very exacting in so far as the requirements upon your attention was concerned. As you begin your deliberation your minds should be in a responsive condition, unalloyed by excitement.

There have been called in this case ninety-eight witnesses. There have been taken, exclusive of yesterday's speeches, 5,745 pages of testimony. It is, of course, beyond the power of human memory to have a clear recollection of all the testimony which has been introduced. You have had ample opportunity to form individual estimates of the worth of testimony.

You have been selected by each side as the judges of the facts. The defendant has had a trial which has been fair and in addition to that I have to instruct you that the law lays down certain rules for the conduct of the prosecution and for the protection of the defendant. These rules must be observed by you.

Proof Up to State.

Justice Goff then recalled to the jurors mind that the burden of proof rests with the State. Said he:

The presumption of innocence belongs to the defendant throughout the case until his guilt has been proven beyond the shadow of a doubt. When his guilt has been proven the presumption of innocence is overthrown. The defendant is not required to establish his innocence. The burden of proof rests on the prosecution throughout the case. The defendant by law is offered the right to take the stand in his own behalf. But he failed to avail himself.

Any arguments of counsel not supported by the evidence must be excluded from your deliberations. All they have said to you as to what you shall or shall not do must be considered by you as useless, unless the evidence supports them.

The prosecution regarded the instructions as favorable to the State's case, when the court ruled as follows:

First—That Becker told Rose that he wanted Rosenthal killed, and, second, that Rose employed certain persons to kill him.

Upon these propositions rests the case of the people. It is not my purpose, gentlemen, to comment on the facts in the case. It is immaterial to you what opinion as to guilt or innocence of the accused may have been offered by the judge or counsel for either side. The testimony that the prosecution relies on is chiefly that of Jack Rose.

Court Summarizes Evidence.

Justice Goff then read a summary of the chief points of the evidence. Everything covered in Rose's story was brought out, as well as the cardinal features of the testimony of Becker's witnesses.

A large crowd gathered about the building, and struggled with policemen to get into the court room to hear Justice Goff charge the jury. It was expected there would be an early verdict.

Mrs. Becker Calm.

The most perfectly poised person in the courtroom was Mrs. Becker, wife of the accused. She smiled hopefully at her husband as she passed on her way to her seat. She shook hands with Lieutenant John Becker, a brother of the defendant. Becker was more carefully dressed than at any time since the trial began. He looked pugnaciously around the room and smiled at his wife.

The jury had been in their seats nearly thirty minutes before Justice Goff, accompanied by his body guard, Police Captain Tierney, arrived at the courthouse.

Rose Becker's Agent.

If it betrue that Becker gave Rose such instructions I instruct you that Becker constituted Rose his agent, and in the carrying out of the design of the defendant, whatever Rose did, Becker, in the eyes of the law, did with him. In other words, Becker selected Rose as his instrument. It matters not whether these words committed the crime were selected by Becker or whether he had any communication with them or had any knowledge of their selection.

If you are satisfied that Becker directed Rose to have Rosenthal killed, it matters little what took place in the manner of making the selection so long as Rosenthal was killed. The two chief questions are:

First—That Becker told Rose that he wanted Rosenthal killed, and, second, that Rose employed certain persons to kill him.

Upon these propositions rests the case of the people. It is not my purpose, gentlemen, to comment on the facts in the case. It is immaterial to you what opinion as to guilt or innocence of the accused may have been offered by the judge or counsel for either side. HISTORY OF CASE AGAINST POLICE LIEUTENANT BECKER

The trial of Police Lieutenant Charles Becker was the most sensational prosecution ever brought against a member of the New York police department.

He was charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a New York gambler who had carried information to the District Attorney.

Rosenthal was shot in front of the Hotel Metropole shortly after midnight on July 16 by men who escaped in a state-colored automobile.

It was known that Rosenthal had complained to District Attorney Whitman, that he had been threatened, that his friends had warned him to be careful, and that he had made particular charges against certain police.

Charges Against Becker.

The substance of his charges against Becker was that the latter was his partner in a gambling house, had installed Jack Rose in a cigar store, and finally had demanded such a "take off" that Rosenthal could not make a living. Becker, as head of the raiding squad, was a power over the gamblers.

The assassination of Rosenthal immediately turned every eye toward the police, and especially toward Becker.

The police and the District Attorney's office were at odds in the prosecution from the first. It was shown that what few spectators old have any straight story to tell about the shooting were turned aside by the police as much as possible.

One man, who caught the number of the assassin's car and reported it to the police, was treated with contempt. The number he gave of the car, which was the correct one, was entered wrong on the police blotter.

But the car was located finally and William Shapiro, who drove it on the murder night, was arrested. Shapiro told his story and the District Attorney's office was able to work so effectively that on August 29 the grand jury handed down seven indictments, as follows:

Becker Indicted.

Lieutenant Becker, with having instigated the murder of Rosenthal, previously arrested.

Harry Horowitz, alias "Gyp, the Blood," gun man, charged with being one of the assassins. At large at the time of indictment, but arrested September 14 with "Lefty Louie" and their wives in hiding in a flat in Brooklyn.

Louis Rosenberg, alias "Lefty Louie," gunman and East Side gangster, accused like "Gyp, the Blood," and arrested with him in the Brooklyn flat.

Frank Cirofico, alias "Dago Frank," steamfitter, but known to the police as a gangster and gunman. He was arrested July 25, nine days after the murder.

Frank Muller, alias "Whitey" Lewis, charged with being one of the principal assassins. He was captured at Fleischmann's, New York, after a fortnight's search.

Jacob Reich, alias "Jack" Sullivan, familiarly known as the "King of the Newsboys," He was a "handy man" for Becker and never was able to explain to the satisfaction of District Attorney Whitman his connections with the accused lieutenant. Jack Rose, in his confession to Whitman, called "Jack" Sullivan the one who took the death message to Rosenthal to lure him out from the Metropole cafe.

William Shapiro alias "Naf," chauffeur of the murder car. Though Shapiro made a statement to the District Attorney it is alleged he tried to protect the murderers.

Meanwhile the District Attorney's office had located thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of deposits made by Lieutenant Becker.

From Jack Rose's confession to Whitman it was figured that 900 gambling houses, poker "joints" and "stuss houses" were paying a yearly graft of over $2,250,000 to the police.

A most important witness, Sam Schepps, of June, told Rose and Webber that he wanted Rosenthal killed and that he followed that by having frequent conversations expressing urgently that Rosenthal should be killed, and showed irritation at the delay in carrying out his desire that Rosenthal should be killed.

That involves, first, that Becker did express such desires and give such instructions to Rose. Secondly, that Rose acted upon those instructions and proceeded to have these orders executed. And thirdly, that under Rose's directions and instructions was carried out the killing.

Rose Becker's Agent.

If it betrue that Becker gave Rose such instructions I instruct you that Becker constituted Rose his agent, and in the carrying out of the design of the defendant, whatever Rose did, Becker, in the eyes of the law, did with him. In other words, Becker selected Rose as his instrument. It matters not whether these who committed the crime were selected by Becker or whether he had any communication with them or had any knowledge of their selection.

If you are satisfied that Becker directed Rose to have Rosenthal killed, it matters little what took place in the manner of making the selection so long as Rosenthal was killed. The two chief questions are:

First—That Becker told Rose that he wanted Rosenthal killed, and, second, that Rose employed certain persons to kill him.

John W. Goff of the New York Supreme Court, has been a marvel of judicial expedition. It has been compared to the procedure in British courts for firmness and dignity and to the French courts for efforts by the presiding judge to get at the root of the matter, irrespective of the wishes of counsel.

The delays, the pubblings, the technical obstructions, the evasions and subterfuges which have marked previous trials, were conspicuously absent before Justice Goff.

There never has been any doubt during this trial who was presiding. It was the Justice, John W. Goff, dreaded by evildoers and insincere witnesses.

He ruled fairly and against one side or the other, as he interpreted the situations. One of the last rulings he made during the taking of testimony was that "Jack" Sullivan, "King of the newsboys" should return to the witness stand and tell his story, even though neither defence nor prosecution wanted it. The Justice, deeming Sullivan's testimony material to the case, forced the government to question him.

By ADA PATTERSON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—All day, Lieutenant Becker, characterized by the prosecution as "The will that directed the brains and brawn of the Rosenthal murder," travelled with his wife the attempt to balance the scales of justice.

They listened intently, as Attorney McIntyre appealed to the emotions of the jury. He spoke with a tremolo in his voice and with unaccustomed tears in his eyes.

They were equally intent when Prosecutor Moss, with the coldness of a surgeon, dissected the facts and asked the jury to think, think, think.

The man seemed a SPARTAN, the woman a HEROINE.

When Mr. McIntyre reached his peroration, the storm of his eloquence for an instant swept the grave-faced police officer from the rack of his self-control. His eyes filled and, blinking to drive the tears back, he shamefacedly drew forth his handkerchief and tried to wipe them away unobserved.

Wife Unmoved.

But the little woman at her station in the most secluded part of the courtroom behind the door that opens from the witness room, sat immovable. A curious repose, mighty in its unshakableness, is here. The burst of final eloquence from the pleader for her husband's life, broke over her and left her dry-eyed. Then only, from this, weariness or weakness, she hung her head and half-closed her eyes.

Yet it was plain that she courted no sympathy and wanted none. She seemed not to see the crowd about her, that had fought disgracefully with policemen to get into the theatre for the terrible drama of life and death.

Charles Becker, as soon as he had taken his seat, turned his head, with its sleek, shining hair, and looked at the figure in blue behind the door. She looked back at him. Neither smiled. Both settled back into the chairs with an air of content. The telepathic signal had been sent and answered.

Though no one understands them, this pair understand each other and are loyal.

Mrs. Becker Sat Quiet.

A nervous women would have fidgeted, at the terrible arraignment of her husband as the prosecution sees him.

An ill-balanced woman would have fainted or raved out. Mrs. Becker never moved during the four hours of that verbal commanding, except to remove her overshoes.

Clearly, she is not one of the women who wear their way through life. She counts witnesses, not tears, the weapon of her sex.

Her instincts, if she permits them, are for the darkened room and the closed and bolted door.

Great Crowd Besieges Court to Hear Charge to the Jury.

When the great trial is over the wonder of those who watched will not be greater at the verdict, whatever it may be, than at the unprecedented demeanor of the woman without a fear; the woman who has given to all her sex a magnificent lesson in the art of self control.

Woman Slain to Protect Miscreants

She Held Secrets of the Vice Band

Letters on Jennie Cavalieri Indicate That She Worked for Law and Order League.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Oct. 24.—An "Underground Railway" for transporting white slaves about the country, organized on the same plan as the "Underground Railway" which in the fifties transported black slaves from the Southern States to Canada, is revealed, it was declared today, by police investigation into the shooting of a girl known as Rose White, and by other names, near here two days ago. A "station" in Bridgeport and another in Chicago are indicated. Jack Johnson's Cafe de Champion has been mentioned in the case.

But while the original underground railway took the slaves from servitude to freedom, this organization carried them from freedom to hideous servitude.

Joseph Bunomo, one of the men arrested in connection with the killing, has confessed, the police say, to shooting the woman, because she refused to return to Chicago with him.

The girl came from Chicago. Bunomo had also come from Chicago within a day or two. Letters discovered in the dead woman's trunk indicate that she was engaged in getting evidence against the white slavers—that she was a spy in their camp, and that when she was discovered she was killed.

Here are the circumstances which connect the slain woman with the white slave traffic, especially in Chicago:

JENNIE CAVALIERI.

Joseph Bunomo, under arrest, was a frequenter of Jack Johnson's Cafe de Champion, up to two weeks ago.

He was sometimes known as Tony Brune, and a woman known as Rose Brune often accompanied him.

Came from Chicago.

Bunomo—or Brune—and the slain woman, arrived in Bridgeport from Chicago Tuesday.

Salvatore Rosardo opened, six months ago, the restaurant from which the woman was taken to her death. He is under arrest and the police say evidence indicates his restaurant was actually a station in the "underground railway" for white slaves.

Letters in the dead woman's trunk show she was engaged in getting evidence against the traffickers.

A card was found in her possession, bearing the name of the Rev. Alire Phillips Aldrich of Chicago, an active worker against the white slavers.

One letter indicated that Joseph Bunomo had become suspicious of the woman.

James Matteo, one of the men under arrest in connection with the woman's death, was a lieutenant of Dominick Cesare, leader of a band of white slavers broken up fourteen months ago when Cesare got a five-year prison term for a vicious attack upon one of his victims.

Bunomo Collapses.

Today found Bunomo, confessed murderer, still in the state of mental and physical collapse that followed a day of almost continuous "sweating," first by Captain George H. Arnold of the local detective force and later by the State's Attorney. Bunomo and the two men arrested as accomplices in the crime—Frank Pellano and James Mateo, will be arraigned before Judge Peck of Stratford, either tomorrow or Saturday. The authorities hope in the meantime to get trace of the two other occupants of the car who are believed are still at large.

According to Bunomo's confession the act was one of sudden impulse, but the police are of the opinion he had been hunting all over the country for the woman, to murder her. He was armed when he left Chicago last Saturday for New York, in search of the woman who deserted him, and he was armed when he arrived here, Tuesday, and he was prepared to kill the woman when he found her in this city, they say. He denies his companions knew of his intention.

He says he met Jennie Cavalieri in Chicago four months ago and they had been living together. She formerly was the wife of Tony Cavalieri, who died. When he went home last Saturday he found she was gone, taking all her belongings. He left Chicago last Sunday for New York to look for her, he says.

Joseph Bunomo is believed by the police to have been in command of the gang of murderers. According to the chauffeur, George Hall, of whom they hired their auto, and who drove them about, the men engaged him, told him to drive to the restaurant where the woman was picked up, ordered him to drive out into the country, alighted with the woman at a lonely spot, began to quarrel with her, (without, apparently frightening her in the least), then ordered him to drive on alone.

A moment later he heard shots, and sped back to find the woman dead on the ground. He raced for town and brought the police.

Bunomo was captured in Bridgeport. Frank Pellano and James Mateo were surrounded and taken in a swamp near the scene of the killing. The other two men, Jimmie Lewis, alias "Hartford Charlie," and Andrew Campello, alias "Big Andrew," are today being sought by the police.

Mateo worked at the restaurant from which the woman was taken, ostensibly as a waiter. He and Pellano, the police believe, were associated in running the Bridgeport end of the "railroad" which led to Chicago and other big cities of the country, and across which the slaves were sent.

Sirolin Will Help Those Suffering from Lung Diseases.

No exorbitant quack claims are being made for the new Swiss Lung Remedy, Sirolin, by those responsible for its importation into this country, but it is steadily going ahead, daily adding to its long list of successful cases.

Sirolin is capable of checking the growth of the Tubercle Bacilli, because it improves the appetite, and builds up the system generally, and enhances the protective agents in the body.

Sirolin is not a secret preparation, and any doctor's physician will receive full information about it from the Sirolin Co., 228 West Broadway, New York City.

Riker-Jarvis Drug Stores and all leading druggists are recommending and distributing Sirolin with considerable success.

ROMANTIC DRAMA IN MOVING PICTURES

But few of the spectacular moving picture productions that have been exhibited in the city the past five years have equalled in absorbing interest, pictorial and dramatic incident "Saint George and the Dragon," which is being shown at the Premiere Theatre for the remaining days of this week. "Saint George and the Dragon" is a romantic drama in three parts, in which more than 1,000 persons were employed in the making. This wonderfully interesting and thrilling story of St. George is faithfully revealed in the pictures, and before the films were sent to this country they were the sensation of the big European cities. Those who enjoy motion pictures that have a substantial and valuable interest to them will find "Saint George and the Dragon" a superior example of the progress of motion photography.

Forget Meat Strike, Attend to Home, Judge Suggests to Woman

Mrs. Samuel Pashansky, a leader in the Malden boycott last Summer, appearing against her husband in the Malden District Court today, was told by Judge Bruce that it would be better for her to straighten out her domestic affairs than to be meddling with the meat strike.

Mrs. Pashansky charged her husband, from whom she was separated and who lives at No. 358 Bryan street, Malden, with non-support of herself and their two children, aged three and five years. On the stand her husband declared his wife was no interested in the meat situation that he would often have to wait two hours for her to come home and prepare supper.

Judge Bruce ordered the husband to pay $ a week for the support of the two children, but stipulated that the wife should not get any of the money. The charge of non-support of the wife was continued until March 3.

A Lady's Comment On Medicine and Religion

The following letter is from a lady whose name I am not at liberty to use. If I should mention her name she would be known by almost every reader. She writes in part:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

"Your article entitled 'Medicine and Religion' has been read and re-read by me many times. It seems to me that the article contains the substance of all that has been said about Christian Science, new thought, suggestive therapeutics and other forms of mental healing.

"I am very much pleased to observe that you are putting out into the world such useful literature. It will do untold good, without doubt; not only for those who take medicine, but for those who try to get along without taking medicine. Your article is true, to the point, and will be read by thousands.

"Medicine and religion have always been very closely associated. Only in very recent years have the two been regarded as separate professions. I am glad you brought this out so clearly.

The tendency of today is strongly in the direction of medicine and religion coming back together again. With your immense facilities for spreading useful information I am sure you will greatly assist the progress of the times in sending out broadcast such articles. I want you to know that your efforts are appreciated.

"As to Peruna I have nothing to say. I very seldom make one of any medicine. But I assure you that your article has so enthused me with the good advice it contains that if I have any need for medicine I shall certainly buy a bottle of Peruna. I shall not neglect to recommend it to others, also."

Pe-ru-na, Man-a-lin and La-cu-pin manufactured by the Pe-ru-na Company, Columbus, Ohio. Sold at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons inquire for The Old-time Peruna. They want the Peruna that their Fathers and Mothers used to take. The old Peruna is now called Katarno. If your dealer does not keep it for sale write the Katarno Company, Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you all about it.

BAY STATE MAN 'BOMB' WITNESS

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 24.—That George O'Donnell, formerly a member of the Denver, Colorado, Ironworkers' local, who served a prison term for blowing up a bridge at Somerset, Mass., June 15, 1908, was paid for the job from the Ironworkers' international dynamiting fund, is now alleged, though hitherto reported dead, was the assertion of District Attorney Miller in the dynamite conspiracy trial today.

Police Officer William H. Medley of Somerset, Mass., told of the dynamiting of a bridge at Fall River, Mass., April 26, 1908, being erected by the American Bridge Company, and the bridge at Somerset, being erected by the Phoenix Bridge Company.

Judge Carver of Trenton, N. J., timekeeper for the American Bridge Company, told how a bridge being put up by his company at Pelham Bay was dumped into the bay the night of February 3, 1908, when the guy clamps were removed.

James T. Lane, bridge superintendent for the McClintick Marshall Construction Company, testified to the fact that dynamite wrecked the Denison Harbor viaduct being constructed at Cleveland, June 22, 1910. Lane was night watchman.

B. U. JUNIOR CLASS ELECTS OFFICERS

Don't Be Scared Out of Fight! That $10,000 May Go to You

Don't Let the Boasters Frighten You With Their Talks of Vote Getting.

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

"I scared out two today," said a District 1 candidate yesterday.

"Two what?" asked the Contest Editor.

"Two candidates in my district that I was a little bit afraid of."

There's a caution for every candidate in this statement.

Do not let ANYONE discourage you.

It is of course, perfectly obvious that many candidates will tell hair-raising tales of the thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions and billions of votes that they have and are "going to get" and the reason is plain—to scare you out of the race.

Just decide for yourself should any of these "boasters" approach you, that you do not propose to let $10,000 slip between your fingers on ANYONE'S say-so.

If you want $10,000 you may have it!

If you want $1,000 you may have it!

Three More Weeks.

If you would like to own $300 in three more weeks you can.

The Boston AMERICAN'S $40,000 Contest has made it possible for any man, woman or child in New England to become the owner of a sum of money, in amounts arranging from $10,000 cash down to $3,000 cash, to $500, to $250 and so on.

It is NOT a question, "Can I afford to invest my spare time in this contest," but rather, "Can I afford NOT to do so?"

It is as easy to roll up a big vote total by subscriptions as it is to even think about it.

Anyone in New England with good red blood in their veins can capture one of the big cash prizes offered if he or she sets out in earnest to do so.

The Boston AMERICAN has made it easy to realize your ambitions, giving you an opportunity to pile up big vote totals by subscriptions as well as through the daily and Sunday vote coupons.

Your father and your mother, of course, are interested in you as well as your brothers, your sisters, your uncles and aunts—they will all help and so will your friends, your acquaintances and even total strangers.

How About Schoolmates?

How about your old schoolmates? How about your fellow employes? How about your club members? EVERYONE will help. All you have to do is to ask them, and don't forget, when asking, to explain that it does not cost anyone a single, solitary penny to help you. That's the beauty of it!

Every day is "cram full" of opportunities. Every hour offers you the prospect of realizing your lifelong dreams.

Start in today on a whirlwind finish for the first goal—a big special cash prize and a position with the leaders in the first vote standing.

A cyclone never stops, you know, until it has swept everything before it.

The candidates who sweep everything before them in the special prizes awarded will have a big advantage in the race for the final $10,000 prize.

Get busy now and give a correct imitation of a Kansas cyclone.

And if you want a broom that will make a real clean sweep, just pile up subscriptions, the votes you get with them will do the rest.

Map out a strenuous campaign for the next three weeks.

Your Two Big Goals.

When the first vote standing appears and with it the Special Cash Prize winners, in three weeks more, DON'T be in the "IF" class.

Hundreds of friends and acquaintances are available as subscribers, and to get them you have only to place your case before them.

A whole page of candidates' pictures will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN. Anyone who neglects the opportunity to get this valuable advertising is simply overlooking an opportunity to get subscriptions and vote coupons.

If you haven't a suitable picture, come in and get an order which will entitle you to a free sitting at the Otto Sarony Company, 146 Tremont street, Boston. If unable to call for this order, send for it by mail.

Remember, you are working now for two things: A position at the top in the first vote standing and one of the big cash prizes, and don't forget these two important milestones in the contest come in three more weeks.

Only votes and subscriptions received up to November 16 at 10 p. m. will be counted in compiling the first vote standing.

One of the New Bedford candidates is Captain G. G. Southworth of No. 151 David street. He is captain of the Fourth Company of the New Bedford Coast Artillery Corps and is a member of the Order of Red Men. He says, "I think the $10,000 ought to come to New Bedford. I am not in this race for fun, but to capture the first prize. If I don't win, the man or woman who beats me will have to 'step lively.'"

IN THE CONTEST.

Captain G. G. Southworth of No. 151 Dana street, New Bedford, who is after the $10,000 prize.

Doctor Husband of Alexandra Carlisle Is a Bedford Man

When the marriage in London, Eng., of Dr. Albert Pfeiffer to Alexandra Carlisle, the brilliant English actress, was announced, it was not known here that the young physician was the son of Dr. Emmanuel Pfeiffer of Bedford. This has just become known, and Dr. Pfeiffer is receiving a host of congratulations on the marriage of his son to the English star.

Dr. Pfeiffer is little known here. His beautiful bride, though, has for seven years been one of the most popular actresses on the English stage and she has had a host of admirers.

Dr. Pfeiffer has been in London but a few years. His father was formerly a practicing physician in Boston, but retired several years ago. He now lives at Bedford with another son, Dr. Emmanuel Pfeiffer, Jr.

When Alexandra Carlisle came to America in 1906 to become associated with Edna Goodrich and Nat Goodwin, her quick return to England, accompanied by Maxine Elliott, then Goodwin's wife, first started rumors that the married life of the Goodwins was anything but happy. Goodwin declared that Miss Carlisle was returning because of homesickness and the fact that his wife returned with her had no significance. His subsequent divorce, however, did not bear out that statement.

Bryant, a well-to-do resident of East Whitman, and Miss Emma L. Holmes of Boston, for several months living in Whitman, are to be married as the result of the lost wallet and its subsequent return. Mr. Bryant lost the pocketbook. Miss Holmes, a waitress, found it.

MRS. PFEIFFER, WHO WAS ALEXANDRA CARLISLE, ACTRESS

ASTOR'S WIDOW IS ALMOST ARRESTED

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 24.—A New Jersey automobile license has been issued to Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, the young widow of Colonel John Jacob Astor. Mrs. Astor makes her Summer home in Barnardsville, and, according to a report filed with the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, was threatened with arrest on the charge of running her machine in New Jersey without obtaining a license here. It was charged she had exceeded the fifteen-day tourist privileges.

What Is Going on in the Boston Divorce Courts

Mrs. Theodore M. Jackson of Chelsea related a string of abuses that, she said, were handed out to her by her husband, in a plea for divorce, before Judge Hardy in the Suffolk divorce court today. Among the many abuses she told of were the following:

"The night after our wedding he beat me.

"He pounded me so hard that he drove my combs into my head.

"He threw a mirror at me.

"He struggled me until I was almost unconscious.

"He took our joint earnings, consisting of $1,200, out of the bank and kept it.

Her husband, Willard L. Jackson, was the excursion clerk at the South Station and she was employed as a clerk at the North Station. She was given a decree.

Deserted at Salisbury Beach.

Mrs. Mary E. Curtis of No. 12 Wise street, Jamaica Plain, told Judge Hardy that her husband, George L. Curtis, left her at Salisbury Beach, seven years after they were married and she had never seen him since. This was on July 20, 1905.

Maud Curtis, their daughter, a pretty twenty-year-old miss, told the court that she had not seen her father since she was seven years old.

"I do not remember what he looked like, your honor," she said.

Curtis was a stationary engineer. They were married at Salem, May 14, 1891.

Says Wife Went to Italy.

Geenadi Nicola Filippo asked for a divorce on the ground of desertion. He charged that his wife, Marotta Rosario Filippi, went back to Italy and refused to come here after promising to do so. He had furnished a home for her and had sent $150 for her passage to this country.

Preparations had been made in honor of her homecoming and the new home was filled with friends to greet her, but she did not appear.

"I came to this country to change my luck," he told the court.

"What do you do for a living," asked Judge Hardy.

"I am waiting your honor," he answered.

"Waiting for what?" asked his honor.

"I am a waiter," he replied. "I wait on table."

Says Wife Threw Frying-Pan.

Thomas T. Johnson appealed to Judge Hardy for a divorce from his wife, Mabel E. Johnson, and offered as evidence of her cruelty, a sightless right eye and deep scars on his face, caused, he said, when she threw a frying-pan filled with hot fat at him, July 18, 1911. He testified that he was in the City Hospital for ten weeks as a result.

Other allegations of assault were told to the court.

Judge Hardy wanted to know if there was any known reason for her actions. "There was another man in my home," answered Johnson. "I went to New York as a result, and she threatened me with injury if I started for that city."

FIND MAN STANDING, BULLET IN HIS HEAD, WAIST DEEP IN BOG

MARLBORO, Oct. 24.—With a bullet wound in his head, Arthur Wentzell, twenty-six, was found semi-conscious today, standing waist deep in a bog at Fort Meadow, a mile and a half from this city.

Wetzell was found by Henry W. Permenter, a letter carrier, and Leon Ghaeli. The police are puzzled. They have been unable to ascertain whether the wound in the head was self-inflicted or the result of an assault.

In the hospital Wentzell incoherently told of bringing money from Boston to his mother. A diamond ring which he wore is missing. Just what took place Wentzell is unable to tell. The bullet is lodged in his head near his right temple and it is not thought he will live.

Wentzell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wentzell of No. 41 Winthrop street. He was employed at the University Club in Boston until lately.

Gigantic Sale Friday and Saturday of the Most Widely Advertised Women's Coats In America $12.75

Every Coat Positively Made to Sell for $25.00

The Siegel stores are the only stores we know of in America selling these coats for less than the regular price.

This is decidedly the biggest cost event of the season. It is another triumph for the Siegel United 4-Store Purchasing Power. The co-operation of our Boston, New York and Chicago stores to give our customers lower prices than all competition.

These are the regular $25.00 coats of the great coat manufacturers known the world over as the largest advertisers of coats in America. The price to you is less than the cost of materials and manufacturing. These manufacturers turn out tens of thousands of coats a year and when they have a surplus they do not close their factory and allow their export coat makers to depart, but they take a loss on the coats on hand and close them out to the stores that can handle the largest quantities.

No doubt you have seen these coats advertised in the magazines. We are not permitted to mention the name, because of the many stores in New England selling these coats at the regular price. But every coats bears the manufacturer's label and you will recognize it as the coat you have seen advertised.

THE MATERIALS are sibeline, Scotch mixtures, diagonals, chinchilla, polo cloth, boucle cloth and others equally fashionable.
THE COLORINGS are navy, brown, tan and gray. Also many two tones and mixtures. Many of the coats are of the fashionable plaid back materials. White coats and black coats also are features. The styles are shown in a great variety. There are 52-inch models and full length coats, in semi-polo and polo styles.
THE TRIMMINGS are the handsomest that have ever been shown, such as fancy buckle effects, patch pockets, velvet collars and cuffs, contrasting pipings and many other ideas, including the braid bound coat. THE SIZES include every size for both women and misses.

Sale begins Friday morning and continues all day Friday and Saturday. No coat worth less than $25.00, all to be sold at one price, only..... $12.75

KILLED IN CRASH; DAKOTAN TELLS CAR MAN HELD OF MANY NAMES

Motorman Herman M. Hartford of No. 61 Franklin street, Allston, was arrested in Brighton today charged with manslaughter as a result of a collision between his car and three wagons, killing one man, injuring two others and a woman.

Dead:

Barrett, Harry, 45, driver, living on Spring street, Watertown.

Injured:

Erler, Mary, No. 371 Lowell avenue, Newtonville, Contusions of side and possible internal injuries.

Worthington, Louis A., 61, teamster. Scalp wound and severely bruised leg. Treated at Station 14.

The dead man was Harry Barrett of Watertown. He drove a four-horse wagon for the Lovell Brothers of Watertown. Two of the horses were badly hurt. When his body was found it was between the wheels of the rear trucks of the car.

A slippery rail is believed to be to blame for the fatal crash.

The conductor, Sydney Taylor, of No. 83 Surray street, Brighton, was not held. Motorman Hartford was bailed in $2,000 for a hearing tomorrow.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

Dakota Dan, twenty-one years ago, recognized a Melrose man named "Snappy" Sergeant, in a Chicago restaurant. He testified today to the East Cambridge court that he heard a man say, "There's Dan Russell." He looked around, saw it was Snappy Sergeant, and then disappeared, as he did not want to be recognized.

A will, purporting to have been made by Dakota Dan three years ago, in which he left legacies to two Cambridge and New York, was read. Dakota Dan denies he made it.

Dakota Dan is on cross-examination in his suit to show he is Daniel Blake Russell, Robert Nason, for the Russell estate, questioned him. Mr. Nason's first question was as to whether, except three times in 1885, as already told, he had made an effort to conceal his identity after he ran away from home.

"Did you do anything else to hide your identity?" Mr. Nason asked.

"No more than to change my name."

"Were you ever afterwards afraid of personal identification?"

"There's Dan Russell."

"Yes," replied Dakota Dan reflectively "When I came East I was in North Chicago in 1891. I was in a restaurant. As I was leaving I saw a fellow at a table whom I knew in Melrose as Snappy Sergeant. I turned to see who it was. I saw it was he. Then I got out of the way."

"Was Snappy Sergeant going?"

"About my own age."

"Did he see you?"

"I think he did. I heard him say 'There's Dan Russell,' and that drew my attention to him."

"Did you ever see him afterward?"

"No; I've tried to find him."

"Did you ever try to evade identification after that?"

"Well, another time I saw Mike Carr on the stage. He was jumping through a hoop. I saw him the next day in my hotel. He went to school with me."

"Was there a time," asked Mr. Nason [illegible] ance as to your identity?"

This brought to his feet Joseph H. McNally, assistant to William R. Scharten for Dakota Dan's defence. He objected to the form of the question.

The question was made plainer.

Came from "Bean State."

Dakota Dan said he had told people about himself all the time since when he had left home in 1885.

"Did you tell people your name was Daniel Blake Russell," asked Mr. Nason.

"I did not usually put in the Blake, but usually called myself Daniel Russell."

"Did you tell them more?"

"Yes. I sometimes told them father was a Senator and they told me that was not."

Must Hub Lose Dallin Indian? Need $8,500 to Keep Statue

Director Fairbanks Favors Site in Front of Museum of Fine Arts.

SCULPTOR AND STATUE

Keep the sculptured Indian in front of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts!

This is the hope of Director Arthur Fairbanks of the museum.

Two other cities are after it.

Shall they have it? It remains with Boston people, who are patrons of fine arts.

Unless $8,500 is raised within a short period, this wonderful statue will be placed in the park of another city. It is valued at $12,000. Already $3,500 has been subscribed.

It is a prized piece of sculpture, called "The Appeal to the Great Spirit," and represents an American Indian on horseback, paying his homage to the rising sun. Nothing is so completely representative of early American life on the frontier.

Awarded Paris Medal.

It is the work of Cyrus E. Dallin of Arlington Heights, where it was executed in 1908. The following year it took the gold medal at the Paris salon.

"In my opinion this statue should be retained in Boston," said Director Arthur Fairbanks, "because it is the work of one of our best artists, whose statues now stand in parks of other cities, while there are none in our parks; and because the presence of so excellent a work of art would be a decided step to a higher standard of public sculpture in Boston.

"It would be extremely gratifying to me if it could remain where it now stands in front of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts."

Many of the subscribers want it purchased and presented to the city of Boston, and erected on the Fens at the junction of Boylston road and Charlesgate West. This has been approved by the unanimous vote of the art commission. It has also been endorsed by the Metropolitan Improvement League.

Others who have given some consideration to the matter think that in its present location in front of the Museum of Fine Arts it is in an ideal location.

But it must be kept in Boston.

Philadelphia in Fairmount Park has a statue of an Indian by this same sculptor as has Lincoln Park of Chicago.

Negotiations have been made the past week to get the "Appeal" elsewhere, and unless a renewed effort be made the plan of keeping it here in Boston will fall through.

Subscriptions to any amount for this purpose may be sent Lee, Higginson & Co., No. 44 State street.

Cyrus E. Dallin of Arlington, and "The Appeal to the Great Spirit," which art lovers hope to keep in Boston by popular subscription.

GREEKS ROUT TURKISH FORCE

church were murdered by the Turks before they evacuated Serridji. This information was received today in a telegram from General Dangles at the front.

Bulgarian Advance Checked.

SALONIKA, Oct. 24.—The Bulgarian advance upon Uskub has been checked according to dispatches from there received here today. They were dated Wednesday, but were delayed. A Turkish force advancing northward through the Struma Valley, the dispatches said, met and hurled back the Bulgarians and captured two heavy guns. The Turks occupied the town of Dewliendospat, driving out the Bulgarians. The casualties were heavy.

Victorious Greeks Pursue.

ATHENS, Oct. 24.—All the Turks have been driven from the Greek frontier. The Turkish army is in full retreat across the Kambunia mountains, followed by the victorious Greek army under Crown Prince Constantine, which is cutting off the stragglers.

The Turkish lines, broken by the rout, are directed toward Salonika.

Greek mountaineers are forming volunteer bands and are attacking the fleeing Turks in every quarter.

At Servitle two Turkish battalions were entirely wiped out. The Greeks captured a great quantity of stores and artillery.

The Ottoman soldiers are making a final stand in Kummunsdo Pass. The outposts of each army kept up an all-night fire and at dawn the general engagement was renewed.

Servian Army Defeated.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 24.—The Servian army of four divisions, advancing from Zibetche upon Uskub, has been defeated by the Turks in a battle at Nagoritsch, near Kumanovo.

A telegram received here today from Uskub stated that the Servian army had been hurled back, leaving behind a large quantity of artillery and munitions.

Following up their advantage, the Turks gave chase to the Servians and a mortal battle is now being fought. Strong Turkish reinforcements have arrived at Uskub.

ARREST DRIVER IN AUTO DEATH

J. Royston Holmes, alleged to be the chauffeur in charge of the automobile which killed seventy-five-year-old James W. Stillman of No. 60 Waltham street, was arrested at his home, No. 96 Gainsboro street, today.

Stillman was struck while on Huntington avenue, near West Newton street, and died at the City Hospital half an hour later. Death was due to a fractured skull and severe internal injuries.

Holmes is twenty-three years old and of pleasing appearance. Following the accident he reported the occurrence to the Back Bay police station and was allowed to go. His arrest was ordered later, when it was learned that Stillman had died as a result of his injuries.

DEATHS

HOWARD J. FRISBEE, for ten years proprietor of a stationery store at No. 104 Dorchester street, South Boston, is dead at his home No. 1 Wallingford street, Brighton. He was a member of Adelphi Lodge, A. F. and A. M.

CORNELIUS CONWAY FELTON, Harvard '72, is dead in Santa Barbara. In 1884 and 1885 he studied in the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Science.

MARCONI REPORTED AS GETTING BETTER

Greatest Disturber of Peace—Drunkenness

Why Tolerate It? Banish It From Your Home for Good. Follow These Directions.

Not a day need be lost—you don't have to wait for the next spree—or even the next pay day—begin now and have peace and happiness in the family and rid your home of the demon drink!

Do this—go to Riker-Jaynes' and get a package of Renova; put a little of it in his tea or coffee; follow directions faithfully; it is tasteless and absolutely harmless and he won't know he's taking the cure. But after a while he'll be wondering why he no longer cares for the stuff and you will bless Renova all your days—so will he—if you ever tell him. Begin now. Every day counts.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a whole package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

MERCHANTS OFFER CONGESTION REMEDIES

Central Distributing Point and Package Subway Two Proposals.

Boston merchants connected with the stores in the vicinity of Summer and Washington streets, have taken up Mayor Fitzgerald's suggestion that they "get together" and devise a remedy for the present congested traffic situation at that corner.

At present, incoming and outgoing bundles are handled over the sidewalk at most or all of these stores. This results in a delay for the stores, a congestion of traffic on the sidewalk, and excessively heavy teaming traffic in the street.

Mayor Fitzgerald has suggested a central distributing station at Park square, where all the stores would park their delivery trucks and receive bundles for delivery to the different sections of the city. Frequent collections would enable a few auto trucks to handle the output of all the stores, cutting the present street traffic by a large percentage.

Another plan is for a tunnel, or a tube, to carry packages to some central station out of the congested section.

Still another suggestion is that no attempt be made to deliver or send out goods except during the hours from midnight till daylight, when traffic is at a standstill, and there are no other teams on the street.

Among the suggestions of the merchants are the following:

By E. A. FILENE
of Wm. Filene Sons Company.

I certainly feel that something should be done towards the establishment of a proper delivery service so that the stores would not be forced to interfere with the traffic, especially on these narrow streets. I do not know whether the stores alone can solve the problem, but I rather think they will find it necessary to have assistance from outside sources.

The AMERICAN has advocated a City Planning Commission, and perhaps such a commission would prove the proper means of solving this problem.

Whatever is done, I wish to say that we will do everything in our power to aid the movement, even sacrificing our own interests to a great extent.

By A. LINCOLN FILENE
of Wm. Filene Sons Company.

I feel that the time has come for all department stores to devise new methods for the handling of their delivery business, and perhaps their incoming merchandise. While all of the stores could continue to do business under the present methods, there is no question but that a new system should be devised which would do away with the necessity of handling all packages on the sidewalks. This new method, if properly planned, would benefit both the public and the merchants.

Speaking for our company, I will say that we have considered numerous improvements. We have even gone so far as to take it up with other merchants who are members of the Retail Trade Board.

This is a matter of the utmost importance to the city, as well as to the merchants, and it should be carefully studied before any move is made. The suggestions which I offer are ideas which have occurred to me from time to time as I have considered the matter.

I feel that the coming method of delivery will be by an electric express. That is, all packages will be sent to a central station, from where they will be sent to various substations. These sub-stations would be so located as to serve each district around Boston. At the substations the bundles could be picked up by auto delivery cars and taken to their destination.

This method seems to me to be very elastic, and could be arranged to meet all requirements. The delivering could be done by one company—a merchants' delivery—or each store could maintain its own delivery service.

Suggests Tunnel Plan.

The means which will be used to send the bundles to the central station will depend upon conditions which are hard to estimate at present. If the time has come when Boston requires a tunnel or subway under its streets similar to the one running under some of the stores in Chicago, then this will be the ideal manner of transportation. But if this is a step too far in advance, other means will have to be found.

I think the matter of utilising any space in the new Winter street subway which is not required for the cars should be most carefully considered. This might prove an excellent solution for the problem. It is planned to construct this subway so that in time it will connect the North and South Stations, and in this manner all of the metropolitan district could be served.

By JOHN SHEPARD, JR.,
Of Shepard-Norwell Company.

The conditions in Boston are absolutely different from those of any other city in the world. The merchants have settled the location for the retail business for the next twenty to twenty-five years, and have decided that it shall be in the district where narrow streets prevail.

The question now arises as to how to stop the blockading of the streets with delivery automobiles and wagons, and it is a serious question, as they practically block the streets to other traffic, and prevent even proper passage of its citizens on the sidewalks.

The proper way, it seems to me, to relieve matters is to run a continuous belt in the opening that has been left in the new subway on Winter street, continuing it through Summer street to some location in the lower end of Summer street, where the congestion is not so great.

A company could be formed to take the delivery of the larger stores, and if the stores would combine in this way the saving to each one would be very great. All the packages could thus be delivered from the stores at present on Winter, Washington street, near Summer street, and at Summer street, to a shipping centre, and send them out from there. This would take practically all the delivery wagons off the street, as the heavy packages could be taken out before and after store hours.

If such a plan could not be carried through, then large motor trucks could go from store to store collecting, and perhaps four or five would be required making continuous trips, which would cover the stores (indirectly referred to) and would permit each of the large stores having numbers of its own delivery wagons or automobiles at its doors continuously.

Some such method as this, it seems to me, will be necessary in the future, and should be developed at once. I have given the matter, of course, only a moment's thought, and the idea can be amplified, I feel sure, to work out much good and make the streets available for customers and comfortable shopping.

By P. H. MAGRANE,
Of James A. Houston Company.

We certainly need a relief from the congestion of traffic. But I do not think it will come from any of the plans offered for handling the merchandise in a new manner. As far as I can see, all of these new systems would cost too much, not only to install, but to operate. What Boston needs, in my opinion, is one or two more direct north and south routes to take the traffic off Washington street. This is a matter which I would like to see studied and worked out, and I am sure it would do much to relieve this condition.

By JOSEPH SIEGEL,
Of the Henry Siegal Company.

The subway idea is an excellent one, and perhaps the ideal one. But I have my doubts as to whether the time has come when Boston can afford such an undertaking. It will come in time, however, I am sure.

Second to the subway system, the idea of gathering up the bundles and taking them to a central depot and then re-routing them for distribution, I have had experience with this very plan in New York, and I know that if it is properly handled all of the merchants will save money by it. While the same volume of merchandise must go over the sidewalk, unless a cut-in is made and the teams loaded in a similar manner to the mail wagons in the postoffice tunnel, the blocking of the streets by a large number of teams or autos would be done away with in either event.

The trouble in this city is that a false centre has been created, and the traffic is forced into a narrow channel. If traffic in general were allowed to spread out in a natural manner much of this congestion would be done away with. I favor a merchants' commission to investigate the matter.

By A. SHUMAN
of A. Shuman & Company.

There is no question that if we are going to be able to do business in this congested district some relief will have to be found in regard to express, delivery, trucking and the receiving and delivery of merchandise.

The most feasible and practical relief will have to come from underground.

Our streets are narrow and congested to such an extent that it is practically commanding to interfere with business, besides being a menace to life and limb. Purchasers during the day have to take the middle of the road, as our sidewalks will not hold the increase of travel.

We ought to make a commencement, for I believe in the future underground streets will be needed for heavy as well as light teaming in the square mile in which Boston's business is congested.

By M. H. GIBSON,
Of the Gilchrist Company.

All of the stores need relief from the congestion which exists in this district during the shopping hours, and personally I should say that the relief should come at once, or as soon as a proper plan could be devised. Just what this should be I am not prepared to say without more time to consider the matter. If the new subways is used, the city, and not a private corporation, should control the thoroughfare or tube or whatever object is used.

An underground roadway would prove most excellent, I am sure. Perhaps this is a trifle too large an undertaking for the present, and a smaller tube would have to suffice, but this, if properly handled, would give the desired results. In considering ways and means, I should heartily approve of a commission representing the merchants. Such a commission would be able to solve the matter, I am sure.

"Help Greece!" Mrs. Elliott's Appeal

The whole world owes a debt to Greece. We still are ruled today by the Greek ideals of philosophy and art. Our debt is not a dead one, but a living issue.

As Christians, also, we must help them in their heroic struggle to maintain the ideals of Christianity above the Moslem domination. The Greeks stand today as the barrier against Mohammedanism, as the Spaniards stood against the Saracens. They are the bulwark in the Levant for Christianity—From Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott's appeal to the women of America.

World Owes Debt, She Tells Women

Suffragist Says Famous Parents Were Always Interested in Hellenes

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, the noted suffragist leader and daughter of Julia Ward Howe, today called on the women of America to lend their moral and financial support to the cause of Greece in the war with Turkey.

Mrs. Elliott, the daughter of famous parents who were actively interested throughout their lives in the welfare and independence of Greece, gave several strong reasons for her belief that it was the duty of American women to bend every effort they can to assist Greece and the Greeks. Mrs. Elliott declared that not only America, but the whole world owes a debt to Greece.

Mrs. Elliott said.

The whole world owes a debt to Greece, that it is incumbent upon every one of us to meet. We still are ruled today by the Greek ideals of philosophy and of art. Our debt is not a dead one, but a living issue. We are indebted to the Greeks for what they have done for civilization. The highest which the human race has ever reached was in the great days of Attic supremacy.

We are still always trying to reach those ideals. We hold them up to our children and we fill the schoolroom and our nurseries with casts of the friese of the Parthenon, of the Victory of Samothrace and of Milo.

In Colleges.

Later, when our sons go to college, again the great training begins. Greek poets, dramatists and philosophers are the basis of our education. Our minds in college are developed by Euripides, Socrates and Sophocles.

The living debt—we must pay it every day!

This debt is the most potent element for the esthetic development of our people. The modern Greeks are heirs and it is to them we must pay our debt.

Another reason why we are indebted to the Greeks is because they are the people of the greatest talent. While today they are not the power they were in the Middle Ages, still the balance of civilization is with them. As Christians, also, we must help them in the heroic struggle to maintain the ideals of Christianity above the Moslem denomination. The Greeks stand today as the barrier against Mohammedanism, as the Spaniards stood against the Saracens. They are the bulwark in the Levant for Christianity.

In all communities, and in Boston among the finest citizens, you will find men of Greek extraction. I attended a meeting some time ago in Faneuil Hall of the Greeks of Boston, and found myself in high company. There are no better citizens than Greeks.

When their kindred and mother country cry out to us in pain, our hearts go out to them and our hands are stretched forth to help them.

I was born a Phil-Hellene. My father, Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, was a hero of the Greek revolution of 1824. Six years of his life were spent fighting with the Greeks in the mountain fastnesses. All his life he was an ardent supporter of the Greek cause. He gave his most precious possession, his eldest daughter, to a Greek, Michael Anagnos.

Fulfilled Dying Wife's Wish.

Our country knows how well he proved himself. He carried on work for the blind in Perkins Institute and founded a kindergarten for the blind, in memory of his wife's dying words, "Take care of the little blind children."

These are my reasons for believing that American women today should do all in their power for Greece, financially and morally.

MRS. JOHNSON'S MOTHER PRAYING FOR VENGEANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—"If the suicide of my daughter might be taken as a warning to others, white girls! If I thought it might save someone else from a similar fate, my own crushing burden of sorrow would be easier to bear, and I would feel that her death had not been in vain."

Mrs. David Terry, widowed mother of Etta Duryea-Johnson, Jack Johnson's white wife, who shot herself in Chicago, September 12, made this statement today, believing it to be her duty, she said, to help Mrs. Cameron drive the black pugilist from the city and country. Mrs. Terry was visited in her home in Brooklyn, where she lives, broken in health and under the constant care of a physician.

The interviewer had called to Mrs. Terry news of the Chicago Grand Jury's investigation into Johnson's alleged kidnaping of Lucile Cameron, of the mother's fight for her daughter, and had finished by asking:

"Mrs. Terry, what, in your opinion, should be done with the husband of your dead daughter?"

Tells of Her "Vision."

"It would be wrong for me to tell you what ought to be done," she replied, her voice hardening. "It is not for me to judge; but every night a prayer goes up from my pillow asking that this man be given the punishment he deserves. Two weeks ago I had a vision of Jack Johnson's end.

"I saw a boat on a beautiful stream. And in that boat was my daughter clothed in white, talking to my dead husband. Suddenly, up out of the water, rose a giant glistening black man. It was Jackson. With boat hands he grabbed for the boat as if he would crush it, but unlike my daughter rowed away and disappeared with a ripple of happy laughter on her lips. Then the water turned as black as ink and wallowed the black man up.

Says Mental Fog Lifted.

"It was all so real that it frightened me though I am a practical woman and not given to visions.

"Is it true that your daughter's married life with Johnson was unhappy?" the reporter asked.

"There can be but one reply to that," the mother answered. "She killed herself. Why she married him was a mystery to me, though Etta was never right in her mind and I have attributed many things to that fact.

"And I believe her suicide came at a period, not of temporary madness, but of abnormalcy. I believe that for one brief moment the mental fog lifted from her, revealing her position to her in all its hideousness. In the retoil which followed she shot herself."

LEARN THAT WOMAN SHOT JOHNSON IN FOOT IN QUARREL IN CAFE

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Jack Johnson, champion pugilist of the world, today defied the forces of law and order that are camping on his trail in an effort to have him indicted. Johnson made this statement:

I am not a slave. I have the right to say who my mate shall be. I have eyes, and I have a heart, and when they fail to tell me who I shall have for mine I want to be put in a lunatic asylum.

So long as I don't interfere with another man's wife I shall claim the right to select the woman of my choice. Nobody can do that for me. That is where the whole trouble lies.

The negro champion pugilist, whom Mrs. Cameron-Falconet accuses in her fight to have her daughter Lucille from becoming his wife, faces also a suit for $25,000 damages brought by Willard Davis, another negro, for alienation of the affections of his wife, Adah Banks Davis.

Woman's Shot Hit Foot.

The woman was a visitor at Johnson's cafe and quarreled with Johnson. She shot him last Thursday, giving rise to the report that he had been killed. The bullet struck him on the toe, and he walks with a limp still as a result. He has had a warrant issued for the woman's arrest, but it has not been served.

The brewery which owns Johnson's license announced today that it would take it away from him October 31. The effect will be to put the champion out of business in Chicago, and several friends said they expected Johnson would leave the city as the result.

The attack against Johnson by his brother before the Grand Jury yesterday wounded the champion deeply, and he has been morose and sullen ever since. He keeps close to his apartments, going out but once a day. That is in the evening when he takes a ride in his automobile, accompanied by a strong armed guard.

BOOKER WASHINGTON SHOWS LESSON TAUGHT BY JOHNSON'S CASE

By BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

Jack Johnson's case will be settled in due time in the courts. Until the courts have spoken, I do not care to either defend or condemn him. I can only say that this is another illustration of the almost irreparable injury that a wrong action on the part of a single individual may do a whole race.

If shows the folly of those persons who think that they alone will be held responsible for the evil that they do. No one can do so much injury to the negro race as the negro himself.

This will seem to many persons unjust, but no one can doubt that it is true. What makes the situation seem a little worse in this case is the fact that it is the white man, not the black, who has given Jack Johnson the kind of prominence he has enjoyed up to now or, in other words, put him in a position where he has been able to bring humiliation upon the whole race of which he is a member.

I do not believe it is necessary for me to say that the honest, sober element of the negro people of the United States is as severe in condemnation of the kind of immorality with which Jack Johnson is at present charged as any other portion of the community.

BOSTON NEGROES SAY PREJUDICE HAS PART IN JOHNSON ACTION

Boston negroes, members of the Boston Literary Club, today circulated a statement defending Jack Johnson and maintaining that race prejudice was responsible for many of his present difficulties in Chicago.

"With Jack Johnson persecuted and robbed of all his legal and constitutional rights solely because of color," the statement declares, "no colored man with a drop of red blood in his veins can do other than protest against this denial of justice."

John L. Davis, Moses F. Hunter, William L. Reed and E. M. Miles are signers of the document.

Tests Show Record Gain by Children in Open Air Schools

Open-air schoolrooms, that are being tried in Boston and some surrounding towns, have proved a great success, tests in Brookline have shown.

The tests, conducted by Dr. H. Lincoln Chase, chief medical inspector, and Dr. Walter Channing, chairman of the Brookline School Board's Committee on Hygiene, show the following results:

After eight months the "fresh air" children showed an average gain in weight of 3.18 pounds, and of 1.68 inches in height, as compared to the 2.69 pound and .95-inch gain of children of a typical classroom in the Winthrop School.

Boston may soon have more of these open-air schoolrooms. Chairman Charles Logue of the Boston Schoolhouse Commission is greatly in favor of the new type of schoolroom, and believes that at least two of these open-air classrooms should be installed in every school building.

ITALIAN DETECTIVE IS ETTOR TRIAL WITNESS

are going around trying to get you to go to work claiming that the American Woolen Company has conceded all our demands.

It is not so! It is a dastardly lie!

Whoever says these things should be thrown down stairs. You should break their bones. You should give them remembrances for the rest of their lives. (Signed) JOSEPH J. ETTOR, ARTURO GIOVANNITTI, G. MAZZERILLO.

Dress Wholly in Black.

Rencordo, who was dressed entirely in black, to a back four-in-hand tie, and who has raven hair, created quite a sensation in the crowded courtroom. He looked like a native boy on the witness stand. He is certainly early twenties. He is one of the star witnesses for the government. During his dramatic recital and his translation of the circular, introduction of which was strenuously opposed by counsel for the defence every word uttered by the witness was eagerly followed by the three men in the prisoners' cage.

"My name is Charles Rencordo" testified the young detective. "I was assigned by the Callahan Detective Agency to go to Lawrence on January 24. I saw Haywood, Ettor and Giovannitti in Lawrence. "On Sunday, January 26, the day of the riot, I saw Giovannitti at the Italian church on Elm street. The church was filled. It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Giovannitti was addressing the crowd. He spoke in Italian."

"Are you not Italian born, are you?" asked District Attorney Atwill.

"No, I was born in this country."

Heard Man Speaking.

"Your father and mother were Italians, though, weren't they?"

"They were."

"Do you understand the Italian language?"

"I understand it and speak it."

"Did you hear Ettor speak at the Syrian church that day?"

"I heard a man with a hoarse voice talking, and was told it was Ettor, but did not see him."

Judge Quinn ruled that this reference to Ettor be struck from the records.

"Did you receive this circular" handing the little blue slip to the witness.

"I did."

"Can you read it?"

"Partly not."

"Read it first in Italian and then give us a translation."

At this juncture Ettor, who sat at the left end of the row of prisoners, a pink flush on his cheek, leaned forward eagerly. Giovannitti, his fellow pleader than his comrades, seized his hand as a restraint. The cage but his eyes were brilliant, and his whole attitude that of keen attention.

A Dramatic Moment.

Carmen, who throughout the trial has acted like a happy-go-lucky boy, showed more concern than at any other time since the proceedings opened.

There was profound silence in the courtroom. Judge Quinn who was seated so close to at his elbow almost reached the witness box, swung around in his velvet chair to face the witness. The jurors also showed the keenest interest in every word.

It was a dramatic situation while Rencordo read in little handbill.

After reading the circular Detective Rencordo testified:

Giovannitti in his address delivered in Italian, told the people to be ready to parade at 9 o'clock next morning. He told them also to go around the corner to a little shop where they could get copies of his newspaper. He said 400 copies would be distributed. I went around there but didn't get any copy. There was too large a crowd.

How He Got Circular.

The circular was given to me when I entered the church. They were being distributed to the people. I got two copies and gave one to Captain Proctor of the State police. This is one copy which I have read.

When he started to translate it, after having read it fluently in Italian, Rencordo, turning to the judge, said: "There is one word here which is pretty hard to translate into English and give the same meaning. It is the word which in English means 'harassers.' But really in Italian it is even worse than that. It is impossible to call a man anything as bad in English as that word means."

"Never mind any arguments," instructed Judge Quinn. "Just give us the translation," and the witness did as quoted above.

Rencordo further testified concerning his movements on the morning of the earliest, when he left the American House, where he was stopping, at 4 a. m.

Saw Armed Men.

"I walked to the police station," ended the witness. "Then I took a stroll down to the strike headquarters, No. 321 Common street. I found a small crowd there. Then I walked to Essex street. About 5 o'clock, I can't recall the time exactly, because my watch had stopped, I saw Ettor coming across the street from the Hotel Needham. He was coming in a general direction toward the same side of the street that I was on. He went up Lawrence street.

POLITICAL NEWS

Vote for Wilson, Foss Walsh and Other Democratic Candidates

Governor Foss and the other Democratic speakers accompanying him in his big tour of the State today turned their attention to the Thirteenth Congressional District. They were accompanied by John J. Mitchell, Democratic candidate for Congress in the district.

"No Doubt of Election."

Speaking at Cambridge, Governor Foss said, in part:

I think there is no longer any doubt whatever of my re-election and the election of the Democratic State ticket. Apparently both branches of the opposing party have conceded this, and are bending all their efforts to save the Legislature.

The measures of reform and public regulation which the opposing platforms now carry are all taken from my own policy, and they express only the eleventh hour repentance of the Republican forces.

The Republican managers, realizing that the people of the State are united in their support of my administration, are now trying to borrow some of the credit, and are loudly advocating the very things for which I stand before the people.

But nobody is deceived by that kind of political activity, because the sentiment of the State is with me in demanding public control of our railroads and other transportation facilities.

The Republican orators are now demanding that the Railroad Commission shall have mandatory powers.

And the railroad monopoly is earnestly working for the success of the Republican candidates, because they know that their campaign pledges will have no more weight in the Legislature of next year than they have had in the past.

G. O. P. Panic on Legislature.

Mr Lodge having sounded the "key note," everybody on the Republican end is harping away at the great danger of a Democratic Legislature and a United States Senator Fitzgerald. Gone Old Party orators are begging Progressives to forget the Progressive platform and the Chicago convention and elect a G. O. P. Legislature! President Taft, Joseph Walker—everybody—can go into the discard, if the "machine" can only have the Legislature and elect another Crane.

Barter Keeps Busy.

William H Barter, the Boston attorney, who lives in Winthrop and who is the handsomest man on any ticket of any party this year, has taken the nomination for Councillor in the Fourth Councillor District as seriously as if something might be done to take one of the Councillor districts away from the Republicans. Mr Barter spoke last night at all the Rowland rallies in Somerville. Governor Foss was there too. The Governor asked every one to vote for Barter, saying that it was high time he had Democrats in the Governor's council to help him get out good policies.

Fine Greeting for Kelliher.

Former Congressman John A Keliher was out on the stump last night another good sign that Democrats of every school are getting together in this campaign as they have seldom been before. Mr Kelliher got a fine reception at the Somerville rallies. THE HOME OF THE NEWEST AND BEST MERCHANDISE

ROBERTS' RECORD ISSUE IN NINTH

Henry C. Rowland, Democratic Candidate for Congress, Has Many Friends in District.

HENRY C. ROWLAND

If the new Progressive party should win everything else in Massachusetts except the State for Roosevelt and Johnson, and make Mr. Bird Governor, with the House and Senate elect Gifford Pinchot to Congress, if the new party should do ALL of these things, and still not Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea go back to the House of Representatives at Washington for a fifteenth and a sixteenth year there ARE Progressives in Massachusetts sufficiently progressive to feel that the cause will have been lost and the fighting fought in vain

For Mr. Roberts is held to be that type of Republican the existence of which brought about the Republican revolt now centralized and vitalized in the new Progressive party

Roberts has been in Congress for four

HENRY C ROWLAND

terms long years. He has attracted little attention out there, but he is a past master in the wonderful and unprofitable little art of "getting by." He is fifty-eight years old. He has been on the public payroll since he was thirty-nine. Before he was first sent to Washington he had served three years in the House and two years in the Senate on Beacon Hill

Only once before has Congressman Roberts of Chelsea been written up extensively. That was in La Follette's Weekly Magazine of September 24, 1910. Senator La Follette was the real Progressive. The merits of his magazine is he don't know the truth and the truth don't cost you free.

La Follette's gave something more than a page to Ernest W. Roberts, under the caption, "A Practical Congressman." Three asterisks will indicate what the Progressive La Follette thinks of Congressman Roberts of Massachusetts

Try to "Get" Roberts.

At the opening of the Sixtieth Congress, Roberts took a stand against Progressive Republicanism in voting for Cannon for Speaker, for the rejecting of the Cannon rules, against revision of the rules, and for the Tammany-Cannon Fitzgerald resolution.

Roberts voted for the Dalzell gag rule on the tariff, to prevent tariff revision in fulfillment of the Republican platform, to put the tariff bill through, except as to five items, as agreed upon by the Cannon appointed, Roberts controlled House Committee on Ways and Means.

While voting for free hides, Roberts voted five times against free lumber, voted for the Payne bill, and for the Payne-Aldrich conference report on the Payne tariff bill.

In the session of Congress just closed Roberts voted consistently to support the Cannon machine, to put through the Stand-Pat program.

When the Pinchot-Bellinger controversy, involving the conservation of water powers, was to be investigated Roberts voted to have Speaker Cannon appoint the investigating committee, to whipsaw Ballinger and Pinchot, and against the election of that committee by the House.

In the battle of the Progressive Republicans in March to amend the rules of the House to provide for an elected, elective Committee on Rules, and exclude the Speaker from membership on the committee, Roberts supported Cannon and Cannonism on every roll call.

In the important legislation to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, although he voted for nothing to the debate, Roberts voted to put through the bill preferred by the railroads.

And when the Cannon organization finally concluded to pass a postal bank law, Roberts was found "in line" supporting the Dalzell gag rule, because of which the bill was passed in the form desired by Wall Street and the Interests.

All of which may explain why the Progressives of Massachusetts feel in honor bound to "get" Mr. Roberts as he stands before the people for the eighth time a candidate for Congress.

What Figures Indicate.

And the fact that the new Ninth Congressional District was cut out at the State House last Summer to be first, last and all the time a certain sure Stand Pat district, serves only to make Progressive party men all the more determined.

The district is the most complicated in all the State, outside the City of Boston districts. It is made up of Everett, Malden, Somerville, Chelsea, Revere, Winthrop, Everett, Malden, Chelsea and Revere are in Roberts' present district, numbered the Seventh.

Somerville has heretofore been a part of the Sam McCall district, the Eighth. Winthrop is in the present Murray Hoslon district, the Ninth.

The old familiar Roberts territory taken away from Roberts this year includes Lynn, Nahant, Saugus, Melrose, Stoneham and Wakefield.

As it stands, however, the new Roberts district looks to be as solidly Republican as the old, for these are the figures taken from the Roberts-Creamer fight of two years ago, the McCall-Dolbrick battle and the Keliher-Murray fight of 1910:

	Democratic.	Republican.
Everett	3,572	2,672
Malden	3,112	2,929
Somerville	3,482	5,624
Chelsea	2,257	2,972
Revere	90.7	1,043
Winthrop	1,486	345
Totals	11,101	14,086

The Progressive party in the district has shown that it is fully alive to the importance of retiring Ernest W. Roberts to private life by nominating splendid men. Mr John Herbert of Somerville, as fine an exponent of the good man in politics as the Progressives have brought forward anywhere in the Commonwealth

Democrats Show Spirit.

Mr. Herbert is a former clergyman who gave up the pulpit some years ago—his voice having given out—to take up the law.

With a district made up as this one is, politicians say that there is even chance that the Progressives might win it. Somerville is declared to be by long odds the greatest Bull Moose stamping ground in the Eastern section of the State. Some say it is more Bull Moose that Worcester itself, has where Norman White is in command for the new party and where every third man you meet wears the Bull Moose emblem in his lapel.

However this may be, the new Ninth District offers the Roosevelt party a magnificent opportunity to retire a Stand-Patter who has been described as Robert Marion La Follette describes Ernest W. Roberts.

The Democrats have shown the proper amount of public spirit by bringing forward a native of Somerville who has never before been a candidate for anything. His name is Henry C. Rowland He is a young attorney.

Some of the followers of Roberts have already begun to sneer at Rowland as a young man who has had "no training in public life."

Went to Work at Twelve.

To which the followers of Rowland reply, cheerfully enough, that they hope that Rowland never will have the training that Roberts has had—referring to the Roberts lambastity by Senator La Follette—and that, anyhow, Mr. Roberts has collected $150,000 from Uncle Samuel, a patronage, down there at Washington, in salary and legitimate expenses—and ought to be satisfied now to pull his nose out of the trough and give somebody else a chance.

Which is, of course, quite preposterous.

Young Mr. Rowland is a graduate of the public grammar schools of Somerville—the Luther V. Bell school in Vinal avenue, out there—and although he had to go to work at the age of twelve he managed to acquire a high school education by attending the night high school in Cambridge. He kept right on working, eventually took a course in the Boston University Law School and finishing under the direction of State Senator Charles H. Innes of Boston.

They think out in Somerville—his young friends do—that Mr. Rowland could go down to Washington for a term and give a good account of himself. None of the Democrats one meets out there is disposed to claim the district for more than one term They do believe that Roberts should be dropped—for the good of progressives of all parties—and they are ready to meet the second term proposition when they get around to it.

But this battle in the Everett-Malden - Somerville - Chelsea - Revere-Winthrop district—more, perhaps, than any other in the State—is up to the Progressive party.

What Can Be Done?

What do the Progressives of Progressive Somerville, and what do the Progressives of Progressive Everett, and what do the Progressives of Progressive Malden, mean to do about the case of Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea?

They can register a vigorous protest against Roberts and Robertsism by voting for the Progressive candidate, John Herbert of Somerville, than whom no Progressive is more progressive.

Or they can make assurance doubly sure by casting their votes for Henry C. Rowland, native of Somerville and product of its schools, who comes straight from the plain people and who is sure to have the plain people in mind every day of his service in the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C.

ADAMS SQUARE

WIFE'S RECITAL THRILLS SLAYER

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 24.—Mrs. Ellen Lewis, wife of the man who shot the wealthy C. H. Tolliver and Mrs. Tolliver to death on the night of May 25, told on the witness stand the story that made a madman of her husband.

It was a terrible story, told with all a woman's capacity for the dramatic. She broke down frequently. When she told the court that the Tollivers had tried to make her believe that her husband had deserted her; that he loved another woman, and that he would not lift his finger to protect her, but voice rose to a wail.

When she rehearsed the incidents of how Mrs. Tolliver assisted her husband in bringing about her disgrace, and of how she was later induced by Tolliver to submit to an operation, her voice broke and died in choking sobs.

When she finished, her body convulsed by the grief that possessed her, Lewis became again the supernatural man. He had been watching her. His face was distorted with rage and his clenched hands were beating together. He heard the story through and then sprang to his feet.

"And I killed him, killed him," he cried, "just because of that. Oh, God—my beautiful girl, my beautiful girl."

He leaped the table where he and his counsel had sat. He cleared the chairs opposite and thrust aside the court officer. He seized the half fainting woman in his arms and raised her to her feet. Her arms clasped his neck. He raised kisses and incoherent endearments upon her, and together—prisoner and witness—wept like children and mingled probably the most dramatic scene ever witnessed in an unwritten law trial

"They told you that I would leave you," he cried, as he kissed her. "The beast. Leave you? Why, I love you—love you better than anything on earth or heaven."

SECOND ANNUAL BUICK AUTO SHOW ATTRACTS CROWDS

The second annual Buick Automobile Show is proving a success far beyond the expectations of the Buick Boston Company The Massachusetts avenue salesrooms have been beautifully decorated and arranged for the occasion, and all who have visited the same so far are delighted with the 1913 Buick models and the setting in which they are displayed.

In its decorations green and gold predominate scarlet and chrysanthemums being used in quantities, and at night, particularly, the effect is most artistic, special electrical fixtures having been installed which illuminate the show rooms most brilliantly

In the Massachusetts avenue show windows are placed the grey Model 30 roadster, which can be pronounced one of the handsomest two-passenger cars shown in Boston, and the blue Model 31 touring car with blue chassis.

On the Newbury street side are the gray Model 40 touring car, and the wine-color Model 35 touring car. At the back of the store in front of a lattice wall covered with smilax and chrysanthemums, are the closed cars, a two-passenger coupe and seven-passenger limousine. In the centre of the store is a stripped chassis of Models 40 and 31.

The success of this first show prompted the management to make it an annual affair, and at that time they promised that the 1913 show would excel the pioneer effort in every way, and they are certainly to be congratulated upon the thorough manner in which they have fulfilled their promise.

U. S. BOARD PROBES ROTTEN TIE STORY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today entered upon a thorough investigation of the charge of rotten ties on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, as contained in the testimony of George E. Everett.

Chairman C. A. Prouty of the Commission referred the report to Commissioner C. C. McChord, who said

"I regard the matter set forth here as very important and will have the allegations fully investigated. Our inquiry has not been closed."

Mr. McChord declined to say what effect the proof of rotten ties would have on the report which the Commission will make on the Westport wreck.

May Change Findings.

According to one of the officials, however, it might, if proved, cause the commission to recast its whole findings and it is said that some of them are severe on the railroad.

One of the minor officials said a very important consideration apart from the development of the rotten ties was the testimony of the vice-president of the road.

Under examination it was shown by this officer that the railroad had ignored the suggestions made to it at the time of the investigation of the previous wreck in 1911.

This official declared to the examiners that the road did not follow the recommendations of the commission and said the first consideration was that the trains should not be late

Everett has announced his intention of using the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad for slander because of allegations by its officials reflecting upon his integrity. Everett again visited the scene of the wreck yesterday and gave another demonstration of the condition of the ties.

Statement by Railroad.

The New Haven Railroad today issued the following statement on the conditions of its road at the Westport crossover:

The track was inspected by the inspector of safety appliances of the Interstate Commerce Commission and by the engineer of the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Connecticut immediately after the wreck and pronounced in good condition

The renewal of ties for the season was in progress and had been nearly completed, and but few ties marked for replacement remained in the track at the time of the wreck, and none of these was in the crossover traversed by the wrecked train.

This is the normal condition obtaining on the long maintained railroads in the United States, and the existence of such ties in the track did not and could not affect the safety of operation

The ties in question were from 6'0 to 8'6 feet west of the scene of the wreck and were not involved nor in any way related to it

The fact that the track in the vicinity of the crossover, and the crossover itself, has been carefully watched since the accident without any changes having been made in it, speaks for itself

MELLEN CHARGES MANY ATTEMPTS TO DERAIL TRAINS

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 24.—At the annual meeting of stockholders of the New Haven Railroad President Mellen made a startling statement regarding track obstructions. He said

From January 1, 1908, to October 15 of this year there have been placed 149 obstructions on our tracks, for the purpose of derailing trains. This is an average of one in less than every twelve days over the period, and since the first of this year there have been forty-one cases, or an average of one a week.

That shows the community in which we are living. It shows one of the difficulties with which we are contending, and it indicates a state of feeling in the public mind that affords you food for thought, in a high ly civilized community like this. Many of these obstructions were on our main line between New York and Boston

When you take that into consideration doesn't it indicate that there is something wrong I put it to you to think it out for yourselves. I think many of you will find the reason.

There has been a great deal said, and with a great deal of vehemence, in the newspapers, to the effect that we have failed to observe the recommendations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with regard to the Bridgeport disaster, and with the result that the Westport accident was one of the things that might be expected, from failing to observe these recommendations.

The facts are as inspector was appointed by the Interstate Commerce Commission to make an investigation of the Bridgeport wreck, and he made his report to the Interstate Commerce Commission. He made some recommendations to the commission. The commission has never made any finding or recommendation on that report whatever

WEDDING GUESTS AT GOLDEN WEDDING

Guests present at the wedding fifty years ago of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Stearns of Brookline attended their golden wedding celebration in Whitney Hall, Brookline. Eight hundred guests in all were present. Mr. Stearns is chairman of the Board of Assessors for Brookline and president of the Brookline Savings Bank. He was born April 28, 1837, in the house where he still lives, and in which both his father and grandfather lived it being in the family for about 100 years.

TOWN UPSET BY WANT "AD."

BROCKTON, Oct. 24.—Between two of gentlemanly just published by Mrs. George H. Washburn, ... Wednesday morning, ... of Portland, present ... Irish and ... persons were ... dog, officers ... first advertisement was:

Exp. Second Maid

Wants ... Irish and ... need not apply. 975 ... Mass. ... Washburn.

The second advertisement is the following elaborate apology:

Wanted

Experienced Second Maid

I regret that the wording of a previous advertisement should have been such as to give the wholly wrong impression that I have any prejudice on the score of race, creed or nativity in.

I already have a colored laundress and an Irish lad working on my place, and I sincerely hope they will always be with me. The fact that I have these valuable employes with me, and that the best of good feeling exists between us, ought to be convincing proof of the fact that I am not imbued with race, or religious prejudice. If the maid at present in my employ were an Irish maid I should certainly have advertised for a second Irish maid, who, presumably, would be more companionable to her than would one of another nationality.

MRS. GEO. R. WASHBURN.
975 No. Main St.

The agitation became so serious the big bakery company of which George R. Washburn is head took radical steps to free itself from responsibility. This was after the firm's products began to be boycotted.

Mrs. Washburn, having passed through a tempestuous week, is ill.

According to Mrs. Washburn's explanation, she advertised in the first place the way she did to gratify the request of her American first girl, who asked that neither Irish help nor colored be considered.

Then Storm Began.

Mr. Washburn is the head of F. B. Washburn & Co., the largest bakers and confectionary manufacturers in the district. Mrs. Washburn is identified with the leading social organizations of the city. Soon after her first advertisement appeared she was showered with telephone calls, anonymous letters and telegrams, which emphatically impressed upon her that Irish foods had been affronted.

F. B. Washburn & Co. do a great deal of business in this city and a plan was at once launched to boycott the firm's products. In the store factory of M. A. Packard Company several girls of Irish descent drew up and circulated a petition. It was freely signed, and the lunch men, who sells Washburn bread, was asked to discontinue doing so, otherwise the signers would not patronize him.

The story spread, and was being discussed by all creeds and nationalities and in homes, offices, stores and factories. Fraternal orders held meetings and petitions were drawn up in many manufacturing establishments. Many persons called Mrs. Washburn on the 'phone.

Company Acted.

The officers of the Washburn Company having learned that its business was being injured, held a meeting. They had learned that societies and individuals had been stirred up over the advertisement and didn't think it fair that the firm should suffer for a thing that it had nothing to do with. Meanwhile its employes voluntarily drew up a petition making clear the fact that no prejudice had been shown there, and that the firm had always shown a kindly spirit and been fair.

This petition with a plain statement of facts was published in the paper in which the advertisement appeared and the offended ones are satisfied the firm should not be injured.

Clever Abe Attell Shows Tonight

Walsh Slight Favorite Over Him

By JACK CONWAY.

IF ABE ATTELL is right, New England ring fans should witness a wonderful exhibition of scientific boxing when the former featherweight champion battles with Jimmy Walsh, the local pride, in a twelve-round contest at the Pilgrim A. A. tonight. Walsh rules a slight favorite, but he will have to be at his best in order to shade Attell, for the latter is one of the brainiest boxers that ever pulled on a padded glove.

Attell and Walsh have fought three times and on each occasion little Abe was returned the victor. He won them, however, in a canter. Attell has gone back during the past two years, while Walsh has now reached his prime and clever as he has ever been.

Jimmy is considered by every fistic authority in the world as the cleverest ring artist at the present time. Members of the Lexington A. C. have seen him train for Johnny Coulon, the Chicago featherweight champion, and they claim the Windy City boy, to consent to enter the ring with Walsh. Johnny Kilbane has twice refused to meet Walsh, as he is afraid of Walsh's cleverness.

Jimmy Walsh is not the fighting machine that he was when he first broke into the game, but he is still a clever boxer and a hard man to hit. He has a knack of ducking punches that is almost uncanny, and he is a wonderful boxer at close quarters. Walsh is also a hard man to stop with a punch, and he has a good right hand swing.

Attell has been working hard for the past month in order to get himself in shape for the battle. He has been training at the Lexington A. C. and has been sparring with Young Saylor, Eddie Murphy and Young Saylor.

Attell has made more money during his career in the ring than any other boxer ever did. But he has lost most of it. Attell is an ardent poker player and has also dropped thousands of dollars at race tracks and ball games. After losing to Kilbane Abe entered a poker game on the coast and cleaned up over $20,000. This was one of his lucky "strikes." He often lost many times this sum in the course of a year or two.

Attell has always admired Joke Stahl's champion Red Sox and played the Boston team every time the club visited Frisco. He has been a close friend of Jake Stahl's for years, and when Stahl was appointed manager of the Red Sox Attell was one of the first to congratulate him.

A WELL-BALANCED preliminary card has been arranged by Alex McIntyre. Patsy De Lacey and Dave Powers meet in a six-round preliminary, while Tony Lorenzo and Tommy O'Brien mingle in another six-round affair.

FREDDY DUFFY of Jamaica Plain will have his work cut out for him when he meets Jack Britton in a six-round bout in New York tonight. Britton is one of the cleverest 135-pound scrappers in the ring and has had no difficulty in defeating Duffy.

Duffy will have to fight the fastest in order to keep Britton at bay. Jack is well known to local devotees of the ring game as a result of his battles in Boston city with Eddie Murphy and Young Saylor.

BOXING HEAD IN PALZER SUIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Frank X. O'Neil, chairman of the State Boxing Commission, was served with a summons today in an action brought by Al Palzer, the heavyweight pugilist, to recover $800. CHANCE BOWS TO MURPHY RULE

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—Frank Chance, former manager of the Chicago National League Club, caused a big stir in local baseball circles today, when in a statement, he said that he would sign any kind of a contract that President Murphy would offer him, even though it only called for $1,200.

Chance says that if such a contract is offered him he will report to the club when asked and try, like the rest of the men, for a position on the team.

"I don't care about the money," said Chance. "I am giving my word that if Murphy offers me a contract outside that of manager I will sign it. I will come back to the training trip and work as hard as any raw recruit to gain a place on the team.

"I say that I will sign a $1,200 contract, although right at the present time I am turning down an offer for $18,000 next season which hinges on the condition that I get my release from Murphy.

"If Murphy doesn't offer me a contract at all I understand I will be a free agent by March 1. That, of course, will be too late to sign with any club as manager, so I guess he has the say as to whether I play ball next year.

"I have more money now than I ever thought was in the world for me when I began playing baseball. I have all I need for the rest of my life, and for that reason can afford to play for the game's sake."

Although President Murphy of the Cubs will not talk on the matter, John Kern, second baseman will be manager of the team next season, succeeding Frank Chance. This announcement was made by a friend of Kern's with a positive assertion that it had come from Kern himself. Kern declined to be quoted on the subject, but it was authoritatively announced that Kern would sign his contract as manager today.

The ceremony had been planned for yesterday, but members of the team are on a "[illegible]" trip and Murphy consented to the postponement to allow Evers time to keep his engagement as a player. What terms the contract will carry could not be learned.

EXTRA GOOD CIGAR

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

The canning of Roger Bresnahan by the St. Louis Club of the National League means this: The club will have to settle with Roger, who has a contract which has four years to run. The late George B. Dovey of the Boston Nationals fired Joe Kelley a year before his contract expired. Kelley took the matter to the National League board of directors and Mr. Dovey had to settle. It will not be necessary for Roger to go to law.

Roger took hold of the Cardinals three years ago and put them on the baseball map. The first thing he did was to weed out the old-timers and get together a team of youngsters.

In the midst of Roger's success with the club, Stanley Robison, owner of the organization, died and left the property to his niece, Mrs. Helene H. Britton.

Mrs. Britton, a handsome and vivacious young woman announced that she would have considerable to say about the conduct of the club's affairs.

This declaration made a hit with editors. Pictures of the handsome Mrs. Britton, pictures of her children, her favorite dog, the story of her life, and so on. But it was noticed that Roger looked rather sheepish the while. He was busy enough, however, to the extent of good cheer to land a long-time contract with the club at a fat salary.

It was all very fine, but—well, you know how these things turn out.

Britton surprised everyone by showing up at the annual meeting of the National League at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. She wanted to know about these baseball matters. If she was to govern a big league club she must find out how these magnates did things.

The magnates bowed low and [illegible] her welcome. She was treated like a queen because [illegible] of her sex. They tried to gather in [illegible] corners and [illegible] she listened to three full days of National League oratory. [illegible] magnates are noted for their long distance speeches, and after it was all over Mrs. Britton declared she had had a perfectly [illegible] time and would [illegible] all the next meeting.

On their part Mrs. Britton [illegible] a most [illegible] were forced to stay on [illegible] and [illegible] behavior, trim their language to [illegible] suited for the presence of [illegible] and [illegible] cigars.

Next meeting Mrs. Britton did not appear. With a sigh of relief the magnates hauled out their cigars and ten minutes after the session started you could have cut the tobacco smoke with a knife.

Soon after the playing season started trades for players he had in mind could not go through because Mrs. Britton, advised by some of her [illegible] baseball friends, would not give her consent.

There was a little [illegible] on the St. Louis team named Miller Huggins. When [illegible] Roger was at the height of his success certain [illegible] began casting about for a reason. They decided that Huggins was the brains of the club and that Rogers was going down. This came to Rogers ears, and he being somewhat human, decided to get rid of Miller Huggins and show 'em.

Nothing doing! Mrs. Britton said "No." From [illegible] time on every trade proposed by Roger was politely knocked in the head by the fair owner of the club.

Dispatches haven't told the name of the new St. Louis manager. Huggins is out of it, that's [illegible] way) a clever little ball player. His [illegible] is of the kind that leads women to say: "Isn't he just too cute for anything?"

WHOLESALE CHARGES OF PROFESSIONALISM IN RANKS OF A. A. U.

DARTMOUTH TAKES ONE MORE PRACTICE BEFORE TIGER GAME

Jeff Let His Sense of Humor Get Away with His Judgment — By "Bud" Fisher

HALPIN DENIES PRO. CHARGES

Wholesale charges of professionalism among the members of the American A. A. U. made by the English Amateur Association has stirred up a storm of protest in athletic circles. Among the men mentioned is P. J. Halpin of the Boston A. A., a member of the Olympic team to Sweden, and quarter-mile champion of United States and Canada. It is rumored that this is so was the only thing that gave any rest to the Harvard squad. About ten minutes of a hard fall of rain, with a high wind that drove the dormitory crews on the Charles into the boathouse, swept over the field, sending the head coach to cover and giving the men a much needed layoff.

The storm put an end to what had been the best elementary practice of the year since signals were started. No scrimmages were indulged in; the risk of injuring the men was too great and the coach still regarded a prize fighter's cut eye or strain a sweater pinched too much as plays which have been practiced, were worked out in detail, and the Brown plays, reports of which have come to the Crimson team through scouts, were applied in detail to the varsity men, and means of defence were evolved.

A number of new plays have been brought out this season, both by the Ironmans and the Tigers, and against these Haughton is planning to drive some novel defences calculated to break them up without delay. It looks like one of the most difficult one of a string to tackle would be a straight, old fashioned flying wedge which created such havoc two years ago.

Brickley once more [illegible] Hardwick to form a combination [illegible] strant of trade as regards the setup positions on the eleven. The running which Brickley contributed was rest [illegible] by that of Goldstein, who, though only recently taken up from the scrubs, is reckoned by all odds the fastest man on a broken field that the Harvard squad can display. If he weighed twenty pounds more, the opinion goes that he would be an All America back.

The men can punt fairly well from a scrimmage, and Brickley at least knows how to handle a drop kick, but no one yet knows how to look after a place or try at a goal from touchdown. Mihalloich stepped into the breech and with Bradlee and Bradley practiced to the limit, kicking from placement. On this is the play that the Harvard backs fear most from Princeton, the coaches are planning to put out an article in this department that will rival the Tiger variety.

Bettie, Logan & Freedley together are selected for a possible trio of backs and substitutes in Saturday's game, should the Crimson pull the score into shape where subs can safely be sent in. The combination is very light, but it made up on it, and with either Logan or Linnihan this interference will bring gains almost every time.

Parmenter and Storer rested, for the fear is not that they will not be in condition that today can be spared from the pen. But where the trouble is coming this year. The backs are good and plenty but without a weight on the line that is

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

"A Happy Marriage Is My Secret," Says Ada Reeve in "Beauty Interview"

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

THERE'S a great deal of Peter Pan about Ada Reeve, the English singing comedienne who has just begun her tour of America in New York.

While she was on the stage singing those rollicking songs of hers, with a merry, gallant air, so whimsical and funny, she was so boyish, so very Peter Panish, that it is easy enough to believe she is England's most celebrated leading boy in the Christmas pantomime.

Now the Christmas pantomime in England is just as much of a convention as Christmas pudding, and the girl who plays the leading boy in the pantomime is envied by her profession, adored by all the children, and occupies, in a way, the role of high-muck-a-muck fairy or special patron saint of all the Christmas festivities.

Miss Ada Reeve is the great and particular Christmas Pantomime Leading Boy, and wherever she goes in England she is known as Santa Claus Junior.

A Joyous Air

She carries with her off the stage as well as on that air of joyousness and gayety of the boy who never would grow up. Her slight figure and humorous ways, her funny, jerky little mannerisms, all make you think that she is Peter Pan or Santa Claus Junior dressed up in very pretty lady's clothes, and doing a stunt in vaudeville as a huge joke.

Behind the scenes Miss Reeve is just the same, a sympathetic personality with a keen and delicate sense of humor.

She had just been singing to a large audience of women and told me how glad she was to be popular with the men, too.

"I am always astonished at the American woman, at her extraordinary smartness," said Miss Reeve. "But isn't she a bit extravagant now? The women over here seem to think a great deal more of clothes than we do in England, especially of all those little extra frills and novelties that cost so much and last so short a time.

"It's always interesting to a foreigner to test an American audience of women,

Miss Ada Reeve, the charming English comedienne, now in vaudeville and I'm always especially concerned in finding what songs they really like.

"The American audience, besides its keen sense of humor, has a great deal of sentiment. And I am hoping some day to be able to try some of my straight, almost classic, numbers the old ballads some of Tom Moore's old songs on them."

I reminded Miss Reeve that she must talk of health and beauty for the edification of the public.

She totally ignored the question of beauty, though she is a pretty and fascinating woman, but there is no pose about Miss Reeve, and she refuses to be self conscious or to be made to feel so even for an interview.

"Let me see; what do I do that especially benefits my health besides working hard. In England I am out in the open air almost all too time; I have a motor, car there and never travel by train. We do not play Sundays"—Miss Reeve looked gratefully to Heaven "so when I am on a tour I can make the long jumps in my open car, taking all of Sunday to do it.

"Of course that would be impossible in America, where the distances are so great and I know I am going to miss it, for I travel in the car without a top, wrapped up in furs in Winter and in raincoats and waterproof caps in bad weather."

"Don't you find that harmful for your voice?"

"No, on the contrary, it seems to do me a great deal of good. I think there is no medicine like fresh air, and nothing so interesting. In the summertime we live at a little place called Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight, and there I have my garden, and then I have a swim every day, which is the one sport I really enjoy."

There is evidently no English actress in the world who does not adore a garden, and now I know why the English landscape is a succession of beautifully set-out and carefully tended flower gardens; all the pretty actresses devote their time to this work in Summer, with the same regularity that they spend their Winters in elevating the stage.

But Miss Peter Pan Reeve was still bending her thoughts on the health problem, and continued:

"I have one advantage over most women, for I am never allowed to worry over anything, and it's worry that makes people ill, isn't it?

"You see I have the very best hubby in the world, he manages everything for me, and straightens out all worries that might fall to my lot. I think that is the secret of my success as well as my health."

Almost a Shock

It came almost as a shock to think that Peter Pan was married, but since she has the very best hubby in the world, both are to be congratulated, and evidently Miss Reeve and the celebrated Dr. Arnold Lorrand are agreed that a happy marriage is the greatest possible promoter of good health and good looks.

Just then the best of all hubbies came in with a concoction of some sort, made of eggs and other soothing things, and warranted to chase away a bad cold, which the artist had caught in our most changeable climate and so ended our talk.

"And have you got the job?" asked the vicar, breathlessly.

"Don't know, sir, just goin' to see."

What is it?" asked the clergyman in amazement.

"Some washing for my wife!"

Hunting a Husband

NO. 42—THE WIDOW'S EVENING OUT IS MARRED BY AN UNPLEASANT MESSAGE

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

BEATRICE MINOR was naturally, in spite of occasional moods of depression, of a happy disposition. Rarely only times when she was really downhearted were those in which an appreciation of her moderate income was forced upon her, or when, as last night, she saw ahead of her no prospect of the pleasure which her soul loved. Today, therefore, her spirits arose with a bound as she looked forward to a merry evening at Helen Robbin's house.

She went about the bungalow singing, and even made several trips out into the rain to pick some gigeous red phlox from the flower bed bordering the gravel path leading from the gate. On the second of these expeditions she saw a man, partially concealed under a huge cotton umbrella, turn in at her gate and come toward her. As he tilted the umbrella back from his face she recognised the rural mail carrier, whom Helen had pointed out to her the day before.

As he was a native of Pleasanton, where all men feel that they are not only as good as, but better than any city dwellers, he did not touch his hat to the lady, but greeted him with a cheery "Good morning!" But he nodded and drew from his bag two letters addressed to her.

"The city folk up here who don't want the bother of goin' for their mail pays me twenty-five cents a week to deliver it to their houses. And as you have no man to send for it, I suppose you want me to put your name on my list."

"Yes, I do," replied Mrs. Minor.

"Well, I make my collections one week from the time I begin my deliveries," he said as he turned away.

Beatrice went into the house with her letters. One envelope contained her telephone bill from town. The second envelope the widow opened with a slight sinking of the heart, for it was from Henry Blanchard. She read the letter thoughtfully. The writer supposed that she was in the country, as she had not succeeded in getting her on her city telephone. But he was mailing this note to her town address from which place it would be forwarded to her.and she already left Boston. He then told her that he would be in Pleasanton on the first day to see about the room he had "spotted" at the Cedar Cliff Hotel. He simply wanted certain bits of his own furniture wherever he stayed, he said, and must have those moved out before he came for his Summer vacation.

The widow nodded, musingly.

"I can't help thinking," he went on, "how good it would be to have a wife to look after my comfort. I often am very lonely without any one but bleedings to care for and welfare."

"Then he would better hire a nurse instead of marrying one!" exclaimed the reader with a curl of her lip. His next sentence made her start.

"If I were sure you were in Pleasanton I would be strongly tempted to come out at once, no matter what the weather might be. But I suppose I ought to wait."

Beatrice tossed the letter impatiently upon the desk. Was Blanchard going to be here so much this Summer that he would spoil her fun? Yet she dare not dismiss him utterly yet. She wished that he would have a sudden business call to California and would stay there for the next three months. By that time she might decide what to do with him. At present there seemed possibilities that she Summer would bring into her circle someone whom she might find more congenial than this elderly man.

She would keep him at a distance as long as she could by the excuse that, as Helen was her dear friend, she could not, while receiving kindnesses from her, encourage from the uncle attentions of which his niece would disapprove. If this excuse failed she must urge upon her suitor the plea that in a small village his attentions would excite unpleasant comment.

With this resolve the widow put the letter by and his devotion from her mind. She yearned to send him away with the satisfactory explanation that she was engaged to another man, always supposing that the other man had as much of the world's goods as and "Uncle Henry."

When, late that afternoon, Mrs. Robbins' man and carriage brought home small Jack the lad's mother was ready to start for her friend's home. It was still raining heavily, and she wrapped herself in a large waterproof and pulled the rubber "apron" well over her dress and herself. She felt strangely happy this afternoon; life and bright opportunities seemed welcoming her. Helen's greeting was so cordial that the widow's pleasure was increased. The hostess exclaimed with admiration as she helped her guest remove her wraps and noted the dress which they had concealed.

"You extravagant creature!" she chided. "The idea of wearing that pretty thing over here on such a day as this!"

"It is only a sample net gown," declared Beatrice. "But the little pale blue China silk under it gives it a rather festive air."

The Widow Laughs

She laughed as she shook out her shiny skirts and sank into a great chair in front of the hearth in the large central hall of Helen's home. The air had grown chilly today and the heat was grateful. The hall was a kind of gathering place for the whole family and contained all the charms of living room, library and music room, for the walls were plentifully lined with book shelves, while in the corner farthest from the fireplace stood an upright piano. As the two women chatted Beatrice's heart again warmed toward her friend, just as it had done yesterday.

She noted what a dainty little creature Helen was, and she liked her all the better for her generous praise of other women's appearance. Beatrice did not pause to wonder if she would feel as kindly toward Helen if she herself did not have the comforting consciousness of being becomingly dressed. That consciousness gives one a feeling of charity for all mankind womankind.

"We are going to have lots of good times together now," Helen declared. "Dr. Haynes is coming up soon to stay at least a fortnight; Paul Maynard may stay all Summer at Pleasanton, although one can never predict just what he's going to do; Robert will be up occasionally, although he's not liking him and his being engaged will make him seem less interesting to you. All these men will stay at the Cedar Cliff. Later on I may invite Robert Maynard's fiancee here, but I've not decided whether to do so or not."

To this Beatrice made no reply. She remembered that Miss Damere was somewhat a protege of Helen's, so she held her peace.

Poor Old Uncle Henry

"The one drawback to our fun," Helen proceeded, "may be Uncle Henry. I can't make the dear man appreciate that he is of another generation than ours, and that he has no place in the way. He insists that I will spend some weeks at the Cedar Cliff, although all the men there must be bored to desperation by him. And when he is there he comes up here to dinner with disquieting frequency."

She eyed her friend keenly, and Beatrice felt herself flush embarrassedly under the gaze. She was glad that at this moment the telephone at the back of the hall rang sharply. Helen hastened to answer it from the rear veranda, answered it. His only reply to the unseen speaker was a curt "All right!" But, after hanging up the receiver and greeting the widow with his usual cordiality, he turned to his wife with a somewhat rueful smile.

"My dear," he said, "I'm sorry to annoy you, but your uncle telephones me that he is at the Cedar Cliff for the night, and has just proposed, rain or no rain, to give himself the pleasure of calling here this evening after dinner."

The two women looked at each other aghast.

"Good heavens!" gasped Helen.

And the widow, with no less fervor and sincerity, echoed her exclamation of consternation.

Household Hints

When baking potatoes grease them first with a little butter, and when cooked they will be beautifully brown and crisp, with the glazed appearance that makes them so appetising.

A good substitute for a small funnel used in filling salt and pepper boxes may be made by utilising the corner of an envelope and cutting off the tip of the corner.

If a strong brine of salt and water is thrown over the coals less soot will collect in the flues and chimneys. The fire, too, will burn clear and bright.

Clothes lines will wear much longer if they are boiled ten minutes before being put up.

To render boots and shoes waterproof rub damp weather rub a little mutton suet around the edges of the soles. Beeswax is just as effective.

A small box of brick dust with a cork in it, kept at the side of sink, will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. Rub a hand of washing time it saves many an after cleaning.

HAIR STOPS FALLING, DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS---25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose hair falling; hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—this very night—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

Rapid-Fire Gunning on a Warship

THIS photograph, taken during the recent visit of the fleet to New York, shows the modern way of sighting a quick firing gun on a battleship. On each side of the gun is an arrangement resembling greatly a pair of huge opera glasses, while out on top of the muzzle is a finder similar in appearance to those used on cameras of certain types. A platform for the range-finder to stand on is placed on each side of the cannon near the base. The platforms swing with the gun, while the sighting is going on. This form of sighting apparatus allows a gunner to become as proficient with a cannon of this size as with a hunting rifle, and has resulted in some wonderful shooting records.

The Girl Who Flirts

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE complaint of a young man that his sweetheart flirts kindles a regret that a word so originally sweet and innocent has become so unwholesome and bedraggled.

Webster says that flirtation is playing at courtship without any cruel intentions.

The word "Flirt," as he understood it, meant a girl in her attitude toward her lover. She flirts with him: She taunts him, she teases him, she fills his days with torture and his nights with despair, and just when he feels that he can endure no more, she gives a sweet little look of encouragement, and he falls in love a little deeper.

The flirt whose we admire in book and story is like a pretty little butterfly, always keeping just far enough ahead of her parsuer's fingers to keep him interested, and make him forget the long chase she has led him. She flirts with only one man. And that man is the man who loves her and whom she loves.

Some day she will confess her love, and I doubt not that it will be lasting and true.

This is the first of prose and poem. It is the woman whose goodness and purity are given added zest by her innocent desire to torment, and to tease the man she loves.

There is a vast difference in the modern application. The word loses all its original prettiness when applied to a girl who ogles and winks and stares to attract the attention of a stranger. It is then that the butterfly has a little bit of the soil of earth on its wings.

If the sweetheart who writes me the letter of despair has a girl who flirts with him, and with no one else, he has given his heart to a woman in whom he always will be interested. She loves him, else she wouldn't torment him. It is the torment of love that is its great joy.

Love has been defined as "a sickness full of woes, all remedies refusing;" "a torment of the mind, a tempest everlasting."

It is "the bread and wine of life, the hunger and the thirst, the hurt and the healing, the only wound which is cured by another."

And only the man whose loved one allures him one moment and shuns him the next, keeping his heart first but then cold, knows all the delightful ups and downs of love making. Unless a woman has a little of this desire to torment, lovemaking becomes as prosaic as buying a steak at the butcher's.

It would look as reasonable to cure a child of dancing while at play, compelling it to take the slow and heavy steps of the aged.

The girl who flirts in this innocent, artless way, with but one man, and that man the one she loves and who loves her, is having her playtime of life. There should be no talk of a cure; time with its burdens will see to that.

Letters of a Slim-Made Woman to Her Fat Sister

Seventh Letter: On the Fat Woman's Thimble-of-Water Bath.

Dear Sis—Just out of the bath—invigorated—glowing and hungrily awaiting the dinner gong with the appetite and digestion of a steeldore. And such a bath as I had—you remember that before I took off that 40 pounds excess weight there used to be a tubful of me-and-a-be act-every-time and that I had to get myself through several "rinsings" to get rid of the excess soap.

You know, sis, what a daily misery—and necessity—bathing used to be when I was fat. But now that I have gotten rid of that excess "displacement"—changed my name from "Ava du Pore" to "Symmetrical Betty." I can not only take a real bath in real water, but can wash my own back.

Now, sis dear, don't forget to follow that harmless formula I gave you—you remember it is 1 oz. Harmol Powder, 1 oz. Cascara Aromatic and 14 oz. Peppermint Water, a teaspoonful after meals and at bed-time.

I beg you in kindness, but don't let me keep too far in the lead—and remember, dear, it will make a big difference in your health and complexion, and you can eat what you like, be as lazy as you choose and still keep on getting thin. Give Harmola a persistent trial and in the end you will win as did your

Affectionate Sis Slim Made BETTY

And no wonder Harmola is the most talked of Reducing Remedy in the world. Over 2,000,000 bottles sold. Sold by druggists everywhere. Or send $1 to Harmola Co., 1 Madison Ave., New York, and a bottle will be sent you by return mail.

READY MONEY

From the Great Play Now Being Acted in New York — The Thrilling Love Story of a Poor Young Man Who Got Rich and a Counterfeiter Who Reformed

TODAY'S INSTALMENT
By W. J. McCONAUGHY
Copyright, 1912, by H. H. Frazee and James Montgomery.

THINGS moved swiftly for Steve Baird in the next twenty-four hours. Mrs. Tyler smiled on him. Grace was gracious—and every man he ever heard of or who could claim the most distant acquaintance with him, heaped him to take their checks. As he said, that roll of money surely made a loud noise. Rosenthal, Stewart and Sam Welch were eager to let all of their particular pals in on "the clean-up" and they kept the telegraph wires busy.

Baird was an honest young man. He knew that he was getting money under false pretenses—morally. If not legally, a criminal. So about noon of New York's Day he gathered them about him and tried to tell that he hadn't got the money he displayed out of the mine. He couldn't tell them where it did come from and they refused to believe him. They wouldn't take back their checks. He was forced to admit that he believed the mine was unquestionably a rich one and they said that was good enough for them.

And the flood kept on pouring in. Even Nell, Welch's servant, and Paul, the headwaiter, dug up the last dollar of their savings and begged him to accept them. And the one thing that everyone asked was to speak to someone who had actually seen that roll of bills. That was all they required.

Steve was desperate but resigned when Mr. Ives suddenly marched in on him. We have noted that Mr. Ives's type of physiognomy was not one that lent itself to the display of emotion, but he showed that he was wrought up about something. In a few crisp sentences he made it plain to Steve that the Secret Service men were following him again—that he and Steve had undoubtedly been watched, and he wound up by accusing the young man of betraying him. Steve's one ray of joy was that Mr. Morgan had brought in the $500 check he promised. Steven wired it to Reardon, who told him he had put on a double shift and he would guarantee results in a few days.

"I'm broke again," said Steve. "I've got enough trouble without telling the police."

Mr. Ives picked up the money off the table where Steve had placed it gingerly when the counterfeiter told him he would get five years if the police found it in his possession. "All right, I believe you," he said. "I'd like to have West see this money just once. He'd appreciate it."

A Counterfeit School

"Why don't you destroy it?" demanded Steve, nervously, as Mr. Ives fingered the money lovingly.

"Destroy fifty thousand dollars!"

"Why don't you go abroad and make more?"

"You want to go through with your bargain?" inquired Mr. Ives calmly.

"I made no bargain!" protested Steve. You persuaded me to keep it over night. I consented—but that was before I realized the danger, before I realized the enormity of the affair. If Secret Service men are after you—they're after me! Does this man West know you?"

West was the head of the Service in New York.

Mr. Ives chuckled. "Does he know me? He followed me to England six years ago. He will continue to follow me. He will never leave me—never! He's spent ten years trying to turn me up. Some day I may allow him to do it. All my pals are in prison. It's the only way I could be with them. And," he fingered the money again, "I could teach some young fellow to make this stuff."

"Sort of school?" inquired Steve ironically.

"Yes," said Mr. Ives seriously. "You're too clever a man to be in jail."

"I know it."

"I don't mean it that way," said Steve earnestly, "But to see a man with your brains bewilling life to the making cheap money!"

"Cheap money!" echoed Mr. Ives indignantly. "It's perfect! The silk, the paper, the engraving, the execution—is superior to the government's. I am the greatest counterfeiter in the world—I am an artist!"

"Oh! Sh! All right!" interposed Steve soothingly, for Mr. Ives had raised his voice.

"Look at that picture of Washington!" he continued, but the telephone bell rang and Baird went to answer it.

"Did someone ask you to come to the office?" inquired Mr. Ives keenly.

"Yes, a Mr. Carter," replied Steve. "I know who he is—I should have asked him to come up here."

"Wait a moment!" commanded Mr. Ives as Steve made for the door. He pulled up one of the large blue envelopes. "These are addressed to your office?"

"Yes. What are you going to do?"

"You don't want any trouble here, do you?" inquired Mr. Ives.

"I should say not!" was the prompt reply. What do you mean?"

"I mean nothing." He put the money in an envelope and sealed it. "But to be perfectly safe it is better to get this money out of here."

"I'm for that!" declared Steve fervently. "Will you take it?"

"Have you any objections to having it mailed to your office?"

"To my office?" repeated Steve, puzzled.

"Yes," nodded Mr. Ives, coolly. "It won't be delivered today. The government will guard it for me over night."

Steve gasped. As much as he disliked a crook, he could not restrain his admiration.

"How did you think of that?" he demanded.

"We have to think of a lot of things," smiled Mr. Ives.

"No one will ever find it at my office," remarked Steve.

"Why not?"

"No one ever goes there."

"Have you any stamps?" asked Mr. Ives, looking over the desk.

"Here they are." Steve produced a strip. "How many?"

"Put on only two." Mr. Ives passed him the envelope. Steve "betted" it.

"It will take more than that," he said.

"Two is safer," said Mr. Ives.

"Safer?"

Mr. Ives nodded and smiled a little. "Then if you don't want to pay the extra postage," he explained, "the government will keep it for you until you do."

The Police

Steve gave a long, low whistle. "You're a marvel to me!" he exclaimed. Then he jumped. A rough voice just outside the door of the room said:

"Grab him!" And Nell yelled: "Thieves!"

The next instant three massive men who would have been spotted as detectives at a mile stepped swiftly into the room, one of them holding a drawn revolver in his hand.

"Hands up! Hands up!" he called sharply and indicated Ives with his pistol. "Put the handcuffs on him!" Then to Baird: "Young feller, you're under arrest."

West, a thick-necked man with a sandy mustache beamed on Mr. Ives and, while he was talking to the veteran counterfeiter and the other two were watching Steve managed to slip the envelope under the mining literature on the desk.

"Well, Walker, old pal," said the detective genially, "did you think you had gone out of business over here—or that we had forgotten you?"

"What does this mean?" demanded Ker," he said cheerfully. "Fun him."

Mr. Ives, coldly.

"It's a pinch, old pal," replied West facetiously.

"Oh?" Mr. Ives' bushy eyebrows went up a fraction. "You have a warrant?"

The policeman hesitated for a bare instant and Mr. Ives felt at ease.

"I don't need any warrant for you," he replied. "Search these rooms," he added to his men.

"Without a warrant?" interposed Mr. Ives mildly. He seemed oblivious to the manacles on his wrists.

"Wait a minute," Mr. West corrected himself. "I've always humored you, Walquietly.

"You live here?"

"This apartment belongs to Mr. Welsh. He is downstairs in the cafe."

"I know," nodded West.

"Excuse me," begged Steve, with defiant irony.

"What are you in this for, young feller?" inquired West with a sort of rough kindness. "You're a new one to me. How long have you known Walker?"

"Who?" frowned Steve.

"Well, Ives, then."

"Oh, Mr. Ives. About three weeks."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

A SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH

"Pape's Diapepsin" Regulates Your Stomach and Ends Indigestion in Five Minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; your head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Diapepsin and in five minutes you truly will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

This Girl Recovered From Consumption

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Consumptives, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. These reports are always at the command of any one interested, and many of the writers in their gratitude have suggested that like sufferers write direct and learn what it did for them. Here is one specimen:

421 Second Ave., Astura, Ill.

"Gentleman: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I wish to express my heartfelt thanks. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years, I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen, the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year.

I will answer all letters sent to me asking as to the merits of your wonderful suffering with lung trouble."

(Sworn Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

Five years later reports still well.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

KONDON'S CATARRHAL JELLY

HAPPY, LAUGHING CHILD SHORTLY

If Cross, Feverish, Bilious and Sick, Let "Syrup of Figs" Clean Its Little Waste-Clogged Bowels.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative physic should always be the first treatment given.

If your child isn't feeling well; resting nicely; eating regularly and acting naturally it is a sure sign that its little Stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels are filled with foul, constipated waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or your little one has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, tongue coated; give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a few hours all the clogged up waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious fig taste. Mothers should always keep a bottle of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggists for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

Stock Markets Open Active and Irregular. Uneasy Feeling Among Traders.

STATE STREET, Oct. 24.—There was a generally easier tone to the Boston market at the opening with trading moderately heavy. Trading continued active throughout the whole of the first hour with prices irregular. At 11 o'clock a few of the prices were: North Butte 29, up ¼; Copper Range 53, up ½; Hancock 24⅝ up 1; American Telephone and Telegraph 142½, up ⅝; U. S. Smelting 45⅝, off ⅝; Mass Mining 6, off ⅛; Isle Royale 35, off ⅛, and American Zinc 51⅜, off ⅜.

New York Opening.

Following the sharp break just before the close yesterday, the stock market opened irregular today with further appearances of liquidation. In a few instances, however, notably in Chino Copper and Southern Pacific, there were good gains. Chino sold up to 47⅝ within fifteen minutes after the opening, a rise of ⅝. Southern Pacific's advance was ½.

Among the initial losses were United States Steel common, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ⅜; Reading, ⅛; Canadian Pacific, ⅝. Erie common opened unchanged, but later declined ⅜.

Traders attributed the selling to the Balkan situation and to the natural uneasiness which always precedes a national election in this country. Predictions were made in Wall Street that the present uncertainty will prevail for several weeks. Amalgamated Copper opened ⅛ higher, but subsequently lost half of this rise. The Curb was heavy.

Interests identified with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul have ordered that the indicated business outlook comes up to expectations the common dividend of the St. Paul, which was reduced from a 7 per cent. to a 5 per cent. basis in January last, will be restored. The old rates next June. Current returns should bolster up hopes of a resumption of a 7 per cent. rate.

It is stated that the September statement of earnings, to be published within the next ten days, will show that St. Paul is carrying a constantly increasing volume of traffic. Operating revenues for the month were approximately $650,000 larger than last year. A comparison with a year ago is practically as favorable as was made in August returns for that month showed an increase of $710,000.

Net returns for September also made a very satisfactory showing, although not to little if any congestion on the lines of the St. Paul as not yet, from reports received with facility, and economy is the watchword in the transportation department. It is said that the profit net for September was well over $500,000.

London Market News.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England showed:

Total reserve increased £114,000, circulation decreased £93,000, bullion increased £21,000, other securities decreased £780,000, other deposits decreased £2,666,000, public deposits increased £2,003,000, government securities unchanged.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is now 49.50 per cent, against 49.70 per cent. last week, and compares with an advance from 40.50 per cent. to 52.75 per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

London copper warrants opened steady and unchanged, with spot at £75⅞ and futures at £76⅛.

After a weak mart the London market showed some recovery notwithstanding the advance of ⅛ to 3 per cent. in the minimum rate of discount of Imperial Bank of Germany. Consols shaded and home rails reflected in heaviness Scotch liquidation. American railway shares and Rhodesian Pacific sold off, but subsequently disclosed some improvement, while Grand Trunks were sustained by the favorable earnings.

Foreigners continued sluggish and mines were irregular on option arrangements. De Beers at 19⅝ and Rio Tintos at 72⅝ were ½ lower respectively.

Cotton Market.

Light frosts over the eastern belt last night caused the cotton market to open one to five points higher today. Cables were also slightly better than due. After the call the list ruled five points above last night's final. Wall Street bought little, while Liverpool sold. Futures and spot in Liverpool were barely steady.

Finest Picture Ever Drawn of the OLD SOUTH CHURCH

With a historical sketch by former Mayor Green, exclusively In Sunday's AMERICAN

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Electrical Vehicle Club of Boston was yesterday reorganized, so that hereafter it will in every sense of the word be an independent organization. Hereafter the association will meet semi-annually, and at these meetings it is the intention of the officers to provide addresses and papers on interesting subjects by capable and experienced men in addition to the regular routine work.

Day Baker, who has ever been successful as president of the association, was re-elected. The other officers elected were: Vice-president, E. S. Mansfield; treasurer, J. S. Blood, Jr.; secretary, H. S. Codman; executive committee, the above officers and C. N. Philips, J. J. Fitch and F. J. Stone. The meeting committee consists of L. R. Edgar, A. F. Neale and H. L. Chaverret; the finance committee, of F. N. Kimball, W. H. Blood, Jr., and F. J. Stone; advisory board, J. W. Brannan, Albert Weatherbee, H. E. Taylor, C. D. Daly, E. C. Tiffany, F. O. Wetherbee, F. W. Emery, J. A. White, F. S. Whiting and C. F. White. A special committee was appointed to draw up the constitution and by-laws, who are to report at the next meeting, subject to the call of the chair.

Unless the plans of the committee in charge of the race meet at Rockingham Park next Saturday go very much astray, there will be some of the highest classed competition that has ever been seen in this section of the country. No previous meet has had any large number of quality drivers and cars than that which is volunteered for this meet.

The former Vanderbilt drivers include Harry Cobe and Charlie Basle, who will drive Jackson cars, and Harry Grant, twice winner of the Vanderbilt, who will be at the wheel of a Stutz. Jack Hart's entry has done great work locally and who has Vanderbilt expectations, will drive another Stutz, while Jenney and Hart will drive National cars such as won the Indianapolis race last May. The Flanders entry, which was entered by Professor Gallup of the Worcester Polytechnic will be driven by Daniel Higgins.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has agreed to run special trains to Rockingham Park prior to the race and immediately at the conclusion of the contest.

With the appointment of H. C. Bradfield as chairman of the press committee, the working organization of the Indianapolis speedway for the next big contest, May 30-31, has been made complete. Speedway Manager C. W. Sedgwick now has a hard working crew, consisting of Homer McKee, one of the best advertising experts in the country; Theodore Myers, who has grown up with the speedway, in charge of the financial and clerical work, and Captain C. P. Carpenter, Indiana National Guard, in charge of public safety.

LOSE RARE MEDICINE WORKS IN BLAZE

Several rare and costly works on medicine and a number of valuable surgical instruments were destroyed in a fire in the Emerson Hospital, Forest Hills.

BIG LOSS BY RIVER FLOODS

NORTH ADAMS, Oct. 24.—Two new concrete railroad bridges were swept away, several large mills were threatened with destruction and twenty-five miles of railway were covered with tons of rock and dirt early today as a result of the worst flood and landslide in the history of the Upper Deerfield Valley. It was estimated the losses might reach at least $100,000. Several narrow escapes from drowning were reported.

As a result of the terrific rains of the past twenty-four hours, the Deerfield river has become a swollen torrent with the water already fifteen feet above the normal channel. Thirty-five miles of the valley were inundated. Tracks of the Wilmington railway were washed away, cutting off all tragic on that line. The last train to run over the road today over two hours for the twenty-five mile trip to the Hoosac tunnel from Wilmington, Employes had to dig their way through the debris.

All telephone and telegraph wires up the valley are down. At noon communication with the flooded districts was impossible.

At Monroe Bridge, in a downpour early today, three hundred men risked their lives building a dam in an attempt to save the big plant of the Ramage Paper company. It was feared the mills had been undermined. The last report received from the village was that the tenpercent dam was holding out against the onrush of water, but that it would be flooded if the river went higher.

At the town of Mountain Mills the first floor of the new plant of the New England Hardwood Company is under from 6 to 8 feet water early today.

The first of the bridges to succumb to the flood was the new concrete structure between Wilmington and Brattleboro, Vt.

ROOSEVELT MAY RESUME STUMP

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The improvement in Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's condition continues and there seems every prospect that he will not only be able to make his Madison Square Garden speech in New York on October 30, but several other addresses, if Mrs. Roosevelt will consent.

The ex-President passed another restful night and awoke in good spirits. He suffered no pain from the wound made by the bullet of John Schrank in Milwaukee ten days ago.

BOSTON AMERICAN

60 AND 62 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 24, 1912.

Largest Circulation in New England, DAILY and SUNDAY.

Is There a Single Leader in the Business of This Great Community Who Will Not Give a Day for Boston?

Of Course There Isn't. This Newspaper Strongly Urges the Sending of a Representative Delegation to New York, to Confer with the Director-General of the Hamburg-American Line and to BRING THAT GREAT LINE OF STEAMSHIPS TO THE PORT OF BOSTON. And Action Must Be Taken Immediately

Three Boston leaders have been doing all that they can do, personally and officially, to get the Director-General of the Hamburg-American steamship line to visit Boston and see and hear what Boston has to offer his great company.

Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Port Directors, greeted Director-General Ballin far out at sea, BY WIRELESS.

Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald telegraphed to Mr. Ballin UPON HIS ARRIVAL IN NEW YORK.

The Governor and the Mayor and the Port Directors have done WELL. It now remains for the rest of us to do OUR duty.

Director-General Ballin "intends" to come to Boston, he tells a representative of this newspaper, IF HE CAN FIND TIME.

If Mr. Ballin cannot find time to come to Boston—and his brief visit to New York is primarily for the purpose of straightening out the dock situation there, so far as it affects his line—BOSTON MUST FIND TIME TO CALL UPON MR. BALLIN.

Boston WANTS the Hamburg-American line.

Boston is BIG ENOUGH TO STAND UP AND SAY SO.

The AMERICAN urges the directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce to MOVE IN THIS MATTER AT ONCE.

Let the leaders of Boston and Massachusetts show to the world that we New Englanders are in REAL EARNEST about the development of New England's great port.

The Hamburg-American line is one of the greatest. Its fleet consists of 387 vessels. Of these 164 are ocean vessels, thirty-five of them large, new, twin-screw passenger steamers.

The Hamburg-American maintains sixty-eight different services, reaching nearly every port of the globe. By the Atlas service it extends to the West Indies and Panama. By the Hamburg-South American service it touches the great ports of South America.

One of the things that brings the Director-General of this great institution to the United States at this time is the imminent opening of the Panama Canal. The Hamburg-American line proposes to BE READY FOR THAT OPENING.

Boston has been GETTING READY for some time.

NOW is the time to STRIKE.

The AMERICAN strongly urges the sending of a representative delegation of the business and official leaders of this community to New York, that the case of Boston may be so presented to Director-General Ballin that the Hamburg-American line will be UNABLE TO SAY "NO" TO US.

Such a visit by such a delegation will certainly bring Mr. Ballin and some of his associates to the port of Boston.

It will DO MORE THAN THAT. It will bring the case of Boston to the attention of the officials of not only the Hamburg-American line, but OTHER lines. It will attract the attention of the United States. In a thousand ways it will help and advertise the NEW BOSTON THAT IS BUILDING UP ALL AROUND US.

Let Us Build Ships and Own the Sea

A Vote for Wilson Is a Vote for Reciprocity and a New Merchant Marine.

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

In the days of James Monroe the American people claimed the Western Continent for democracy. We could do this without overstrain because we commanded the sea-trails that bind the continent together from Cape Horn upward.

We had fought two wars with England—one for an earth-grip, and the other for an empire on the sea. We owned the land and we owned the ocean.

The Federalist party, which was made of the same stuff as the present Republican party, had opposed the war that was waged for our sea-rights. That was why the Federalist party went all to pieces in 1816. The Democrats elected James Monroe to the Presidency, and the country had eight years of swift expansion in land-faring and sea-faring.

We were a wonderful, amphibious people in those days. The American sailor was the best sailor in the world—everybody admitted it. And our ships, American made and American manned, plowed up the seven seas, as our landsmen ripped the prairie sod.

There was no good reason why we should not have gone right on in our double conquest of the soil and the waters. It was bad government that tied our sea-hands behind our backs and made us a one-handed nation.

If the government at Washington had not fallen under the control of privilege seekers—who cared everything for their private wealth and nothing for the commonwealth—our commercial navy would never have been swept away. We should be today the chief owners of the ocean.

As the case actually stands we are a nation of land-lubbers. Our ocean carrying trade is in the hands of a gigantic foreign shipping trust that taxes us all the business will bear—and then a little more to kill the business.

However, we can get back our vanished ships, we can cover the sea with our sails and smoke-steamers by reviving the spirit of free government.

Free government goes well with sea-roving. To stay the process of political corruption, what we need is salt—the sea-tang.

Now is the time to strike for this refreshment.

And Woodrow Wilson is the man to head the strike.

The Republicans have gone to pieces in 1912, just as the Federalists did in 1816. The Democrats under Monroe suppressed the land-rats and water-rats, and saved the freight and cargo. The Democrats under Wilson can do the same.

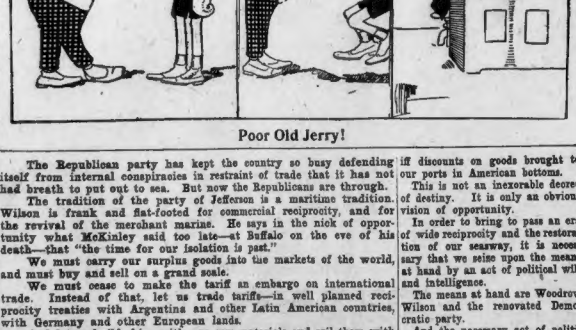
DEAREST - I WISH YOU WOULD TRAIN THE EXERCISE YOULD DO YOU GOOD -
I'M GOING TO LOVE I'M CRAZY TO KNOW HOW TO BOX -
I WANT TO LEARN HOW TO BOX -
YOU KNOW - KID WANT TO START RIGHT IN?



IT'S VERY SIMPLE WHEN YOU GET ON TO THE SOME POINTS -
I WANT TO LEARN ALL THE FINE POINTS -
HERE'S A COUPLE OF THEM -
DEAR JOSIE I WON'T BE ABLE TO SEE YOU TONIGHT -

Poor Old Jerry!

The Republican party has kept the country so busy defending itself from internal conspiracies in restraint of trade that it has not had breath to put out to sea. But now the Republicans are through.

The tradition of the party of Jefferson is a maritime tradition. Wilson is frank and flat-footed for commercial reciprocity, and for the revival of the merchant marine. He says in the nick of opportunity what McKinley said too late—at Buffalo on the eve of his death—that "the time for our isolation is past."

We must carry our surplus goods into the markets of the world, and must buy and sell on a grand scale.

We must cease to make the tariff an embargo on international trade. Instead of that, let us trade tariffs—in well planned reciprocity treaties with Argentina and other Latin American countries, with Germany and other European lands.

And let us build ships with our own materials and sail them with our own men. If our ships cost more, to make and to man, than European ships do, we can easily cancel the odds by allowing special tariff discounts on goods brought to our ports in American bottoms.

This is not an inexorable decree of destiny. It is only an obvious vision of opportunity.

In order to bring to pass an era of wide reciprocity and the restoration of our seaway, it is necessary that we seize upon the means at hand by an act of political will and intelligence.

The means at hand are Woodrow Wilson and the renovated Democratic party.

And the necessary act of political will and intelligence is to vote right on the fifth of next month.

Letters of Women Money Earners Teach Faith and Courage

Special Announcement to Women Who Earn Money at Home

One Dollar will be paid for every letter contributed by Boston AMERICAN readers, and used in the AMERICAN, containing ideas helpful to those WOMEN WHO WISH TO EARN MONEY AT HOME. This department is organized to help women help themselves. It will suggest opportunities for money-making and will help those who wish to develop the ideas they are now using in their homes for increasing their incomes. Won't you please tell me what you are doing and why you are doing it, so that one may be of service to some woman who is struggling in the dark and who needs our help? Address MABEL BARCLAY URY, Boston AMERICAN.

This Department Will Appear in the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN

By MABEL BARCLAY URY

"WHAT a fine teacher of women you are," a friend said to me recently. "Your articles in the AMERICAN are doing more good than you can realize. You are a good teacher."

And at all that I simply laughed. My friend doesn't know the truth. Only those who have helped edit the letters can realize fully that the true teachers are the women who have contributed so generously.

Their letters have taught me more of courage, of wondrous faith, of unswerving perseverence, of undying determination than I ever learned elsewhere. They have made me see clearly that the true heroes are not those upon whose breasts are pinned the medals offered by a steel-made millionaire. They have opened to me their homes and their hearts, and in both I have seen heroism too great to be described by anyone who has not gone down into the depths where grief and sorrow and hunger and death live.

A husband dies—no insurance—leaves a wife and three children—no money in the bank—little food in the larder—less credit at the store—hunger staring all in the face.

That's a common story. That is the story behind unscented letters that have come to me. Mothers have knelt down to pray for light and found that the darkness only settled closer about them. There seemed little use in going forth to battle. The odds seemed too great.

And then the love of life, the love of offspring, the hatred of defeat came to the rescue. Food was needed—and clothing. Work had to be done. WHAT? That word burned into brains too weary to think—burned in until its fire changed into feelings of faith, of determination of the will to go forth and work.

The little girl stood with her nose flattened against the window of a Washington street shop, looking at a warm jacket displayed within. "I'm goin' t' pray for that!" she said to her newsboy brother. "All right," he answered, "you pray and I'll sell papers and we'll get it."

So have mothers stood with noses flattened against the hard windows that kept them from touching the good things of the world. First they prayed—and then they "sold papers." How these women have "sold papers"—how they have earned money you will learn if you will but read the letters printed below:

Her Son Her Drummer.

I am earning money at home in this manner: I make holders of pieces of cloth, fill them with cotton, bind and sew a brass ring on each; they sell for five cents each. I have a son who takes them after school and Saturday and goes from house to house. I average from $2.50 to $3 per week. I often receive orders for a half-dozen from one person. Sometimes friends will give cloth, and there is very little to buy, so it is most all profit. The holders are well liked and washable. I hope this idea may help someone.

FRANCES C. McCORKLE.
No. 15 Autumn street, Everett, Mass.

Alters Suits and Gowns.

I make my extra money by doing alterations on suits and gowns for my friends. When they get a suit or gown they send for me. I go and fit and deliver it to them. I do not charge as much as the stores, and make enough for all my expenses, also a little bank account.

MRS. J. J. FLAHERTY.
No. 486 Quincy street, Dorchester.

Crochets Shawls.

I buy Shetland floss yarn at 10 cents a skein and make shawls. I charge 10 cents extra for every skein I use; for example, if I use fifteen skeins I charge $2 for the shawl. I crochet during spare time and have all the orders I can fill, for the shawls are warm and handy to put on if going for a trolley ride or a trip by the sea.

We would be lost without the AMERICAN.

—MRS. MARY HALL.
No. 19 York street, Fall River.

Teaches Dancing.

I know a young lady who makes quite a lot of pin money teaching bashful young men ballroom steps in her home. She charges 75 cents an hour, and there are many fellows who work who take advantage of this who are too backward to go to a dancing school.

MRS. BART J. LYNCH.
No. 78 L street, South Boston.

Classes in Music.

There are so many ways a woman having a good musical education in her youth can turn the same to account. First, good accompanists are in demand in a small town to which singers of note often do not carry their own accompanists. The pay on such occasions is from $5 to $10.

Second, form classes of ten girls, not over twelve years of age, issue little blank cards to each girl with her name at the top; purchase price of card, $1.50, covering ten sight reading and vocal lessons combined.

Hold these classes every Tuesday and Friday afternoons from 4:15 to 5:15, giving little hints on breathing and good standing position when singing. Teach sight reading from blackboard.

If one has regular piano or vocal pupils these girls can appear in a program in some special drill or other work. This will give you $15 every five weeks.

MRS. C. L. V., Woburn, Mass.

Making Rugs.

I know a woman who earns an income weaving small rugs for bath and bed room use. Old waists, skirts, ties, dresses, etc., are washed and cut into strips varying in width according to the quality of the material. All of the edges are turned in and basted together to prevent ravelings. The body of the rug is a coarse, strong canvas which is used by fishermen in making nets and seines. It comes in two shades of brown, about two yards wide, and the price is moderate. The strips of cloth are threaded into a bodkin and woven in and out the meshes of the net, keeping the stripes close together. The ends of the canvas are turned under and carefully sewed down, making a neat edge. There is no counting of threads, the in and out of the bodkin does not need to be exact, and the slight irregularity adds to the beauty of the work. Two color schemes or a general color scheme can be followed.

MISS D. T., Middleton, Del.

TWO GIRLS

By William F. Kirk

THERE was a girl I used to love,
With hair as brown as Autumn leaves.
She caused sad sighs and misty eyes—
None but a losing lover grieves.
She mocked me with her little ways—
She spurned me, flouted me, and fled.
"What's love to me?" I whispered then,
Because I said my love was dead.

There was a girl I le arned to love,
A girl with hair like sun-kissed wheat.
A girl with wealth and youth and health,
With twinkling eyes and twinkling feet.
We two were wedded, and we loved,
But Cupid oftentimes deceives.
There was a maid with whom I strayed.
Her hair was brown as Autumn leaves.
